FURTHER EXCITEMENT IN NEW-ORLEANS

Political Aspects of the Difficulty.

Incendiary Speeches----Bloodshed.

SERIOUS TROUBLE EXPECTED.

New-Orleans, Friday, June 4—7 P. M.

We are on the eve of a fresh excitement. Inflammatory placards have just been issued by the so-called American Party, calling upon the Americans to resist the authority of the Vigilance Committee. More than one-half of the American Party are on the Vigilance Committee, and many of the leaders of the Committee are well-known Know-Nothings. One man has been killed and another wounded accidentally in the Vigilance camp.

New Orleans, Saturday, June 5.

Incendiary speeches have been made to the mob by Col. Christy, one of the candidates for Mayor, and Col. Henry, of the Nicaraguan army. They call the Americans to arms, and offer to head a charge against the Vigilance Committee to-day.

12 o'clock, M.—T. P. White, a money broker, was shot at, and very dangerously wounded last night, in front of the City Hotel. He was a white man, and is said to have furnished the cotton for the barricades of the Vigilance Committee. Over fifteen hundred names have been enrolled by the Vigilance Committee. Trouble is expected to-day.

IMPORTANT FROM UTAH.

The Report of the Expulsion of Governor Cumming Discredited.

Captain Marcy's Train Cut off by the Mormons.

St. Louis, Saturday, June 5.

The Republican learns from a gentleman who left Fort Leavenworth on the 2d inst., and who had read all the letters from Camp Scott to May 6, that the news that Governor Cumming has been driven from Salt Lake City is discredited. Letters from Camp Scott of the latest date mention no such event, and nothing was known there of what had transpired in the City, there being no official intercourse between Governor Cumming and Colonel Johnston.

Dispatches from Governor Cumming to Secretary Cass, were received at Camp Scott subsequent to the departure of the mail on the 6th May, and as the news of Governor Cumming's expulsion was only derived from the Mormon bearers, these dispatches are regarded as improbable.

Information had reached camp Scott that a supply of beef cattle from Oregon was close at hand, and that Colonel Hoffman was within seven to nine days' march of the encampment.

The Democrat has just received the following dispatch from Leavenworth, 3d inst:

"William Crossman arrived here last night from Fort Laramie, and states that Capt. Marcy's train has been cut off by the Mormons. Particulars of his story have been forwarded by mail."

DETAILS OF NEWS PREVIOUSLY RECEIVED.

From the St. Louis Republican, June 4.

Now comes the latest accounts across the plains, for which we are indebted to Captain Weaver. Writing from Fort Leavenworth, June 1, he says: "Stephen Renebberger, United States Mail Agent, arrived here this morning, in four days from Fort Kearny, having left Camp Scott on the 6th May—[and, of course, bringing news about four weeks later than any we have received.] His dispatches say that Governor Cumming, with his staff, had attempted to enter Great Salt Lake City, but were driven back to Col. Johnston's camp by the saints. The Mormons are in arms, and determined to resist the United States troops to the last."

Capt. Weaver adds to his note: "Gen. Harney, who is still here, is of opinion that the war has just begun—that the Mormons will endeavor to maintain their ground to the last—and that the late report of the peaceable reception of Gov. Cumming was all intended as a ruse to gain as much time as possible."

The reporter for the Associated Press, at Leavenworth City, gives some additional particulars. The news from Camp Scott is to the 6th of May. On that day two Mormons came into Camp Scott, with dispatches from Gov. Cumming, at Great Salt Lake City for Secretary Cass. Nothing was known at the camp at this date of any proceedings in Salt Lake City. The troops were expected to move towards the valley by the latter end of May. These items were brought by the mail to Fort Leavenworth.

But the expressman who brought it says he left Fort Laramie on May 18. That at Fort Kearny the commanding officer directed him to inform Col. Monroe that he had information to the effect, that Gov. Cumming had been expelled from Salt Lake City, and that the Mormons had determined to offer a vigorous resistance to the army, at the same time requesting Col. Monroe to push on as speedily as possible. This intelligence was received at Fort Kearny through the mail, and it was communicated to the expressman verbally, not having time to write it.

Colonel Hoffman's command, with the Government stores from Fort Laramie, was met seventy-five miles beyond Fort Laramie. They must have suffered great detention, as they had then been a very considerable time on the route. It is said that they had met with snow two or three feet deep; that they had lost many animals, and that the streams were very high. It was reported that the troops at Camp Scott were living on mule meat.

Governor Powell and Major McCulloch, the Peace Commissioners, had passed Fort Laramie. They were obliged to swim the Platte at the latter fort. Their instructions, it is said, are, to require an unconditional submission and to make no other terms with the Mormons. If, however, the news of the expulsion of Governor Cumming from the capital be true, there will be no occasion for their services even in this capacity. War being levied by the Mormons, or a portion of them—the legally constituted Governor of the Territory having been driven from the seat of Government—no alternative remains but to chastise the rebels into submission, and this will be done, no doubt, by the army under Gen. Johnston, before any reinforcements, except those from New-Mexico, can reach him. If it was generous in the Government to give them a chance of escaping from the penalties of rebellion, by laying down their arms and becoming good citizens, now that they have elected to disregard these overtures, the world will justify us in enforcing, with the bayonet, submission to the laws. This must be done, and it is fortunate that the Government has not abandoned any of its preparations for an effective campaign in that quarter.

In four or five days the contents of Governor Cumming's dispatches to Secretary Cass will be made known, and then we shall understand the exact position of affairs in Utah.

From the St. Louis Democrat.

Leavenworth, Tuesday, June 1, via Boonville, Thursday, June 3.

An express has just arrived at Fort Leavenworth, reporting that the Mormons have driven Gov. Cumming from Salt Lake City, and the Mormons were in arms and determined to resist the army to the last.

No official information has been received at the Fort from Camp Scott, but the authenticity of the above intelligence is regarded as unquestionable.

LATER.

Intelligence from Camp Scott to the 6th of May has been received at Fort Leavenworth. On that day two Mormons came into the Camp from Salt Lake City, having dispatches from Governor Cumming for Secretary Cass.

The troops were expected to move towards the Valley by the latter end of May.

Nothing was known at the Camp at this date of any proceedings within the city.

The foregoing came by mail to the Fort.

The Expressman who brought it supplies the following additional particulars:

He left Fort Laramie on the 18th inst. At Fort Kearney the commanding officer directed him to inform Col. Monroe that he had information to the effect that Gov. Cumming had been expelled from Salt Lake City, and that the Mormons were determined to offer a vigorous resistance to the army, and requesting him (Col. Monroe) to push on as speedily as possible.

This communication it is understood, was received at Fort Kearney through the mail brought by this messenger, to whom it was communicated verbally for lack of time.

Colonel Hoffman's command were met 75 miles beyond Fort Laramie. They had encountered snow two or three feet deep, and had lost many animals. All the streams were very high.

The Peace Commissioners had passed Fort Laramie. They were obliged to swim the Platte.

At the latter post it was reported that the troops at Camp Scott were living on mule meat.

INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs and the British Aggressions—The Volunteer Regiments—An Affair of Honor—Collector Schell—The Election, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

Washington, Sunday, June 6.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs to-morrow will have under consideration the general subject of the British aggressions, and will endeavor to come to a resolution thereon.

It is the intention of the Government to call out the volunteer regiments in a few days. The War Department has no troops at its disposal to keep open communication between Leavenworth and Camp Scott. It is still believed that the Ohio and Kentucky regiments will be accepted.

An attempt will be made, in accordance with the President's wishes, to extend the session until the 21st. The chief obstacle is, that the members have spent all their salaries, and have got no money.

The affair of honor between Hughes and Harris was amicably arranged last night, without going to the field. The affair creates a good deal of talk.

A large sale of condemned arms will soon take place at the Arsenal.

It is a mistake to suppose that the opposition to the confirmation of Mr. Schell, your Collector, rests exclusively upon his having aided the Willett's Point swindle upon the Government. Very grave and serious charges in relation to non-performance of duty as Collector, and even malfeasance in office, are on file here against him. Neither is there any doubt that most of them can be substantiated. It is stated, for example, that Mr. Schell, or, rather, his brother has a relation in the Custom-House, against whom one of the Deputy-Collectors made proved charges tantamount to embezzlement of money; and that the Collector, instead of discharging him, or procuring his indictment, caused him to be transferred to another place, thus shielding him from both punishment and disgrace. It is also said that discriminating favors have been shown in the payment of duties, where goods have been seized on fraudulent invoices. The 80 cents-a-case swindle, and the double-cartage business of Nos. 12 and 19 Broad-street, are instances. It is probable, in spite of all these charges, that Mr. Schell will be confirmed. If he is, the entire responsibility of the Willett's Point affair will thereby be fastened upon the Secretary of War.

There is a specially strong political feeling exhibited in reference to the election to morrow. A large number of strangers are here of both parties, principally Baltimoreans, and several rows have taken place to-day. Every precaution has been taken against a disturbance to-morrow. O.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Saturday, June 5.

Mr. Hughes, of Indiana, sent a challenge to-day to Mr. Harris, of Illinois, who promptly accepted it, but it was afterwards suspended or temporarily withdrawn for explanations. Late to-night an arrangement was made by which the offensive language in the debate in the House, on the 2d inst., was withdrawn by each party, in the order that it was uttered, and the difficulty thus amicably adjusted.

The following officers have been ordered to report on board the sloop-of-war Saratoga, on the 10th inst., now at Norfolk preparing to join the Home Squadron: Commander, Turner; Lieutenants, Wainright, Crosby, Gamble, Jesse, Taylor and Hamilton; Surgeon, Wheelwright; Assistant Surgeon, W. Johnson, Jr., and Purser, C. J. Emery.

The Court-Martial ordered by the Secretary of the Navy, to convene here on the 10th inst., to investigate the charges against Commander Boutwell, consists of Commodore Stringham, President; Captains Breese, Sands, Glynn, McKean, Mercer, Lowndes, Marston, Wilkes, Glendy, Purviance, and Commanders Robb and Tilton.

Washington, Sunday, June 6.

Mr. Sickles intends to introduce in the House to-morrow a bill authorizing merchant vessels to arm to protect themselves against search, visitation and detention, and to make captures, which are to be condemned as prizes, and authorizing the President to employ the naval forces for the same purpose.

The Senate Committee on Finance propose to amend the House Ocean Mail appropriation bill, by authorizing a change of the terminus of the Collins line from Liverpool to Southampton. In case of the failure to perform a trip by the Collins line, the Postmaster-General is to give the ocean and inland postage to other parties carrying the mail. The compensation for the Havre and Bremen lines is limited to the ocean and inland postage.

The President has signed the bill declaring the title to land warrants to vest in the widow, heirs or legatees in all cases where proof was filed, but the warrants not issued during the lifetime of the claimant, and making them personal chattels; warrants issued under the act of March, 1855, are assignable.

Senator Henderson's funeral took place this afternoon from the Capitol. The President and Cabinet, Foreign Ministers and Members of Congress were in attendance.

XXXVth CONGRESS......First Session.

SENATE....Washington, Saturday, June 5.

Mr. Bigler, of Pennsylvania, introduced a motion to extend the session till the 21st inst. Laid over.

Mr. Houston, of Texas, announced to the Senate the death of his colleague, Mr. Henderson. From remarks we learn that the deceased was born in Lincoln County, N. C., March 31, 1808, that he received a liberal education, and chose the profession of the law, to which he has always been attached, and in which he was eminently successful. His health becoming affected, he went to Cuba; returning, he selected a location in Mississippi until the invasion of Texas by the Mexicans awakened his energy, and he did much towards arousing the chivalry of the South. On repairing to Texas, he was appointed Brigadier-General in the Texas army. When the army was disbanded, he retired to private life, till called to be the Attorney-General of the State, which office he retained until a vacancy occurred in the State Department, by the decease of General Austin, the illustrious father of Texas, when, General Rusk having declined, General Henderson was appointed to the office, and remained in it until 1837, when he was sent as Minister to England and France, to negotiate the recognition of Texan independence. He returned from Europe in 1840, and resumed his profession at San Augustin, in partnership with General Rusk, until 1843, declining a position in the Cabinet. He was next appointed an assistant Minister to Washington, whence, returning, he resumed the profession of the law, until the annexation of Texas was consummated. He was next a member of the Convention from Augustin County, and afterwards elected first Governor of Texas.

After some time a requisition was made on Texas for troops for the Mexican War, and General Henderson took command. He acted a conspicuous part at Monterey, and was commissioner to negotiate the articles of capitulation of the garrison. He declined a reëlection of Governor of Texas, and since then has been recognized as an eminent citizen. On the death of Gen. Rusk he was unanimously elected to the Senate. He was no ordinary man. He made his mark on Texas, and the nation was not unacquainted with his merits and virtues. Mr. Houston then proceeded to pass a feeling, touching and eloquent eulogium on the deceased Senator; when, bursting into tears, he was compelled to sit down, without offering the usual resolutions.

Mr. Davis, of Mississippi, added his testimony to the personal worth and lion-courage of the deceased, having served with him at Monterey.

Messrs. Crittenden, of Kentucky, Reid, of North Carolina, Hayne, of South Carolina, contributed their expressions of esteem, and Mr. Seward, of New-York, from his intimacy with the late Senator Rusk, having recently formed the acquaintance with the deceased, added a meed of praise, taking occasion to add that if a centrifugal force exist in politics, a centripetal power in the country and Congress counteract any tendency towards a dissolution of the Union.

The usual resolutions of respect were passed.

Adjourned.

The funeral will take place to-morrow, from the Senate Chamber; the managers of the ceremony being Messrs. Clay, Bayard, Hammond, Davis, Wade, and Seward.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Washington, Saturday, June 5.

The Senate bill for the admission of Oregon into the Union, was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Resolutions announcing the death of Senator Henderson were received.

Messrs. Bryan, of Texas, and Quitman, of Mississippi, delivered eulogies.

The customary resolutions of respect were adopted and the House adjourned.

The British Aggressions—The Pensacola Canard—The Question of Peace or War with Great Britain—Miscellaneous Matters.

Correspondence of the New York Times.

Washington, Saturday, June 5, 1858.

The report of the firing into an American ship near Pensacola by a British cruiser, was a canard. It caused the Government the price of a telegraphic dispatch to establish its want of truth. It provoked the House of Representatives to receive and refer a resolution authorizing the President to repel and to punish attacks upon American vessels by force. If the President has not that power, he cannot receive it from a resolution of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Crittenden has taken the true ground—we care nothing as to what doctrines upon maritime right Great Britain asserts, but will resist the enforcement of the pretended right of search, and will not permit the abuse of the right of visit, though the consequences be war. It is no more than probable that the British Government will disavow the acts of its officers. If it is true, as alleged, that the African squadron have been transferred to the Cuban station without a change of orders, it does not mitigate nor palliate the offensiveness of the acts from which our commerce has suffered, and by which our national dignity has been so grossly insulted within sight of our own shores. But if that be the truth, it cannot with safety, be assumed that even that explanation will be given us. We want, also, something more than an explanation. We want redress and indemnity.

The question of peace or war between the United States and Great Britain has very much changed since the last trial of arms between them. We were then a nation of eight millions of people. Our navy, as John Q. Adams sneeringly remarked, consisted of two frigates and a schooner. Then, steam was unknown as an engine of war. In 1858 we have a population of thirty million, of whom, owing to the large immigration of late years, a larger portion are male adults than in 1812, or than any other nation now possesses. Half a century ago the means of transporting supplies and concentrating troops were insignificant. Now, we have 30,000 miles of railroad, all converging upon the principal points of the seaboard, which will require to be defended. Since the last war we have completed an admirable system of fortifications, which was then sketched upon paper.

Our Navy is small, but comprises some of the largest and most powerful vessels in the world. I doubt whether there is any single vessel in the Navy of France or England which could cope with the Merrimac or the Niagara. The Collins steamers and others, were built for the contingency of being called into the Navy. We have abundant materials in our yards for the construction of other vessels. We are deficient in steamers, and yet it must not be forgotten that we propose no aggressive war, and for the defence of our own coasts one steamer will have the efficiency of four cruising for purposes of attack; for they must arrive on our coasts nearly destitute of coal, and without it they are logs upon the water. The British navy contains 548 vessels—of which 289 are steamers. With the aids which we can summon from our merchant and mail steamers, I am not certain that we have not now as efficient a force of this class for defence, as Great Britain has for attack.

The Coast is not only well fortified, but the people are well armed. We have twenty-six arsenals and armories, at which a steady accumulation of the best arms of the age have been going on for forty years. Col. Craig gives a good account of our ordnance and ammunition. With these advantages, if we could with credit and success, meet the 30,000 troops which England sent against us in 1812, surely, we should be in no danger beyond the usual hazards of war, from armies of 300,000.

A war is only supposable upon the hypothesis that the two nations have suddenly become insane. Yet there is probably in each a small faction of war spirits, disorderly and turbulent persons, eager for the excitement and novelty of such a change in the habits of the nation. Some of the New-Englanders affirm that though, as ever, favorable to peace, they will not hold the same position as the war men of any other section, because war would be less calamitous to New-England, and might bring her greater advantages than at any former period of her history. Her navigating interests are now so prostrated that they could hardly be injured. Her manufacturers would receive the benefit of complete prohibition of foreign imports. Moreover, politically, her influence in the Union would be increased by the annexation of Canada, which is regarded as a certain result of war.

The Turkish Admiral and suite has left us without ordering a ship. He wished, it is said, only to spy out the naval strength and cunning of the country.

The ability of General Cushing has secured for his client, Judge Watrous, of Texas, a safe deliverance from his troubles. The Committee, which has had his case for six months under investigation, resolved, 4 to 4, not to impeach him.

The same Committee have under consideration charges affecting the official standing of Judge Irwin, of the Western District of Pennsylvania. The case is said to be a bad one.

When Captain Hartstein and the Arctic, which vessel was sent to look after the Styx, the Tartar, and Buzzard, were last heard from, the ship was paddling off Hatteras, at four miles an hour, having made from the Capes, 80 miles per day. There is one advantage in such a vessel: if she gets into a fight, she cannot run away.

Three reports will be presented from Mr. Haskin's Committee of Investigation on the purchase of Willett's Point. Mr. Haskin will give the opinion that the Government has been pillaged of $100,000. The two Republicans, Mr. Wood of Maine, and Mr. Hall of Massachusetts, will exonerate Governor Floyd and Mr. Schell from censure, and it is presumed that the two Democrats will eulogize the conduct of all concerned in the affair.

Mr. Nugent, of California, in former years a well known Washington correspondent, will be appointed to a desirable office in California.

The Committee of Finance of the Senate have voted to report $147,000 arrears of payment to the Collins line, and to change the terminus from Liverpool to Southampton.

THE SWILL-MILK INVESTIGATION.

The Doctors Disagree—Counsel Turned Out—Testimony of Dr. Shanks, Dr. Gardner, the City Inspector, Health Wardens, and others.

The Swill-Milk Committee of the Board of Health met again on Saturday and received a large additional amount of testimony. The room, as on former occasions, was well filled with persons interested in the swill-milk business.

Soon after the Committee entered the room, the Chairman, Alderman Tuomey, said the Committee had been in consultation, and had concluded that as the investigation was one of fact and not of law, there was no need of counsel on either side.

Alderman Tucker said the community had got the impression that the investigation was not proceeding fairly. He had been spoken to by a number of gentlemen in relation to the investigation, who thought that the fact that a legal gentleman was present in the interest of the swill-milk men, and no counsel for the opposite feeling, was an evidence of an inclination on the part of the Committee in favor of the swill-milk interest. If he had been present at the former meeting of the Committee, he would have objected to the introduction of counsel, for either side. The investigation was not one in which legal technicalities were involved. The question was as to whether milk from swill-fed cows, kept closely and continuously confined in narrow, ill-ventilated and filthy stables, was or was not deleterious—whether, in fact, it was or was not injurious to those who used it. It had been charged by high scientific and medical authority that the use of swill-milk was one—and an important one—of the causes of the alarming infant mortality in the City of New-York. The business of the Committee was to glean the facts from scientific men and these familiar with the modus operandi of the swill milk business. The investigation was not one to which it was necessary to apply the Court rules regulating question and answer, which often deterred an honest man from stating what he knew, but one of inquiry merely, on which subsequent action of the Board of Health would depend. It was more in the nature of an investigation by a Grand Jury than of a trial before a Court, the object of the Committee being to find whether there was sufficient truth in the popular statements in relation to swill milk to warrant an abatement of the nuisance, if such it should prove to be, or to institute proceedings for the removal of such establishments. Such being the objects of the Committee, (being merely preliminary to any action.) it was not deemed necessary that counsel should appear; although, should any gentleman in the room deem any particular question necessary, and should he state it to the Committee, it would be put, as, so far as he was concerned, he was desirous that all the facts in the case should appear in the investigation.

The decision being against the appearance of counsel, the Chairman called for the first witness. There being no volunteers, Mr. George Moore (swill-man) said he thought it was not fair to exclude counsel. The swill milkmen had been charged with having murdered some 8,000 infants. He could assure the Committee that the investigation then in progress would not be the last, in any event, probably. And, consequently, he thought that the investigation should be conducted legally, and according to rule, as much of the subsequent proceedings might depend upon the decision of the Committee of Investigation.

Alderman Tucker said it was not a question of law, but of fact. All the Committee wanted was to get at the facts in the case, and he thought they could do that without assistance from counsel on either side.

Mr. Moore (agent for the Swill-Milk Interest)—You are aware, Mr. Tucker, that probably the swill-milk men are, generally, not educated; and that they are not qualified for the preparation of suitable questions for such an investigation.

Alderman Tucker—Well, I think you are qualified to suggest any questions that may be necessary to a proper understanding of your side of the question.

Alderman Tuomey—Mr. Leslie, I think, as there does not appear to be any other witnesses present, we had better put you on the stand.

Mr. Leslie—I must object to being examined at the present time. I think the City Inspector is the most important man to be examined in an investigation like this; and I think he should be put on the stand before me.

Alderman Tucker—Well, we will put him on the stand first.

Mr. Morton, the City Inspector, was called for, but although he had been present but a few moments before, he was not then in the room.

A gentleman stated that he had gone out to attend to a matter of business, and that he would be back in a few minutes, which was the case, as he appeared in a very short time.

Mr. Morton being sworn, said:—If the Committee will allow me, I have a word to say, as the Executive Officer of the Board of Health, in relation to the matter before the Committee. The Committee will allow me to observe that if this investigation is intended to be a legal investigation, from which the parties in interest are to be judged, I think, as the Executive Officer, in such matters, that it were well that the investigation should proceed legally. The 3d section of the act of 1850 provides that the City Inspector, when the trial of any person for having established a nuisance should be intended, the person or persons to be tried should have at least three days' notice. In accordance with that provision of the charter, he had given to the Judges, as President of the Board of Health, the necessary documents for such an investigation; he had done so for the purpose having the matter in proper form. If it was the intention to proceed against the (16th-street) man, in the form of a legal investigation, it was important to have the matter in proper form, in order to insure success for the right; and, if such was intended, he thought the parties should have the required three days' notice, in order that the proceedings should be legal.

Alderman Tucker—This is not a legal investigation. It is merely an inquiry by a Committee of the Board of Health. The Committee was appointed to inquire in relation to the deleteriousness of swill-milk—to get at the facts and report them to the Board.

Mr. Morton—As an Exective officer I thought it my duty to call attention to the subject, as I saw by the papers that counsel appeared for the parties interested in the swill-milk business, and none for the City.

Alderman Tucker—You were not in when that matter was decided. We have altered that. The Committee has arrived at the conclusion that, as this investigation is in relation to facts and not to law, there was no need of counsel on either side.

Mr. Morton—Then it is merely a Committee of inquiry?

Alderman Tuomey—Yes, Sir.

Mr. Clinton (who appeared for the stump-tails) called the Chairman's attention to the fact that when he appeared at the first meeting he had informed him frankly of what parties he appeared for, and that he had said it was so understood.

The Chairman said such was the case.

Mr. Morton—Gentlemen, in order to have the matter come up regularly, when it comes up for legal investigation, I have placed the proper documents in the hands of the Mayor—the documents bearing upon the subject in the aspect of a nuisance. I thought it due to the Committee and to all the parties concerned, that I should make known what I had done at the present time.

Alderman Tucker—The question before us is not as to whether these stables are a nuisance to the neighborhood—it is whether swill-milk and the cows kept in those stables, when used as food, are detrimental to health.

The resolutions by which the Committee was appointed, and which stated the object of their appointment, were now read, showing the Committee to be one of Inquiry merely, and then the City Inspector proceeded to make his statement.

Mr. Morton—Some years ago, having been connected with the Department, I became acquainted with this matter. My first knowledge of the matter was through Dr. Dwight. There was then some excitement in relation to the swill-stables, and many complaints that they were a nuisance were sent to the Common Council. This was in 1854. About that time Mr. Downing made his report. The report speaks for itself, and it contains nearly all I knew of the matter at that time. I visited the stables myself, in consequence of the complaints. It was stated that the cows that died in them of the disease were dressed and sold as meat. I had a watch put upon the stables, night and day, and sometimes we found that cattle which had died there were dressed apparently for the market. In one instance we found that a cow that evidently had died on Saturday night, had been taken out early on Sunday morning. There was considerable excitement in the neighborhood. (Sixteenth street.) Soon after arriving on the ground I entered the premises, after we had opened the door with a crow-bar, and I found a cow lying inside with her throat cut, and another dressed for the market. I caused an examination to be made of the cows. The liver was found to be badly diseased, and the lungs very much congested. They were badly diseased. The owner was willing to have them taken away. I found still greater difficulty at the Thirty-ninth-street stables. I sent my men there to watch, and they were sometimes driven away.

Q.—(by Alderman Tucker)—Was there any means used to ascertain whether those dead cows had been milked immediately before death?

Mr. Morton—I can't say as to how recently they had been milked; it was said that they had been milked the morning before they died.

Mr. Smith—(an agent of the "stump tails")—I object to his stating what was said; he should only state what he knows of his own knowledge.

Alderman Tucker—We want to know what the general rumor was.

Mr. Morton—It was said that the cow had been milked up to the day she died; there was an excited crowd there; it was on Sunday morning, and they were very energetic in making their complaints.

Mr. Smith—I object to his stating what was merely rumor.

Ald. Tuomey.—The Committee will only consider what he states of his own knowledge.

Mr. Smith.—Yes. But it is all taken down and published to the public, and we are injured by it as much as if it was fact.

Ald. Tuomey.—(To City Inspector.) We want only what you know of your own knowledge.

Mr. Smith—(Agent as before-mentioned)—I say that whether the Committee considers it or not, it is all taken down by the reporters, and it goes to the public and is injurious.

Alderman Tucker—(to witness)—I want to know whether you made inquiries as to when the cows had been milked just before death.

Mr. Morton—I could not say of my own knowledge that the cow had been milked just before death. I am confident that she had been in the stables until that morning, but I could not say as to when she had been milked last.

Q.—From whom did you receive information of the matter? A.—From Mr. Tracey and from others.

Q.—(By Alderman Tucker)—Mr. Martin, about how many cows have died at the Thirty-ninth-street stables, and been taken away.

Mr. Martin—I cannot say; I can only speak in relation to the whole number of dead animals that have been carted off in the City; the man in that section could tell.

Q.—(By Alderman Tucker)—When did you visit these stables last? A.—I was up there yesterday.

Q.—How were the stables three months ago? A. Personally, I have no knowledge of how they were; my officers can tell.

Alderman Tucker—That we can get from them.

Alderman Reed—Can you give us any information in relation to the milk? A.—I cannot; I have always supposed it was hard to tell where the milk used came from, as the wagons are marked "Westchester," "Orange County," &c., never "Swill-milk." I have heard that what Alderman Tucker received did not hurt him. [Laughter.] I will say, in addition, that I went up there (Sixteenth-street) yesterday, and examined the stables; I found the cows in stalls measuring four feet by about nine.

Alderman Tuomey remarked that the Committee had been up there and examined all the stables.

Mr. Morton said that besides those he had examined some brick stables in Fifteenth-street that were different from the others. In the Sixteenth and Thirty-ninth-street stables the cows had not room enough to lay down on their sides, but in the brick stables they had. The ventilation was better, and the stables were in better condition.

Q.—Were the cows in better condition? A.—Yes; but there was not a large number there.

Q.—Would you use the milk from those stables if you knew it? A.—I would, as soon as any other, unless I knew what milkmen kept and milked the cow.

Q.—How about Thirty-ninth-street stables? A.—I visited them, and came to the same conclusion that I did in relation to the 16th-street stables. The cows were in no better condition.

Q.—How were their tails? A.—Well, they were something in the style described by Coroner Connery, on a memorable occasion; I may say here that I had another cow examined; she was not as bad as the one I have spoken of; the people there said she died of fever; I have heard that the disease from which the cows die in these stables is prevalent among cows in the distillery districts of Ohio; I have heard it said that butchers can tell Ohio cattle by that; I have heard also that the butchers prefer cattle that have been fed on swill, but not when they are sick; I have found large quantities of diseased meat in the markets; the parties generally say that it is left at their stalls, early in the morning, by the owners, for them to sell on commission; I think large quantities of it come from Brooklyn.

Mr. Charles Trapp was the next witness. He stated that he was the Health Warden of the Sixteenth Ward; he had seen the cows in Sixteenth-street; he was in the habit of visiting them about once a week, and thought there was not so much disease there now as formerly.

Q.—How many cows have died there within the past six months? A.—I cannot say; I have seen five or six within the past three months.

Q.—Have you ever seen sick cows milked there, and the milk sold? A.—I don't know that I have. The last time that I examined them there were 883 cows there. The stables were in a very good condition, comparatively. I did not see any cows with ulcerated sores on them. I have seen them when I thought their tails had recently been cut off. I was told that they cut them off to keep them from whisking them in the faces of the milkers.

Q.—How long have you been an inspector? A.—Five years.

Q.—How long have the stables been in as good condition as they are now? A.—During the past two years.

Lewis J. Kirk was called next. He said: I am Health Warden of the Seventeenth Ward; I never was in the stables but once, and that was the day the Committee was there; I was in the Thirty-ninth-street stables once before that—say about six months ago; we were watching them at the time.

Q.—Have you dissected any cows that died in the stables? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many? A.—Six, I think.

Q.—Where did they come from? A.—I have no doubt they came from the Sixteenth-street stables; the cow that Mr. Morton mentioned was the worst of all; it was the worst I had ever seen.

Q.—Had it been milked to the time of its death? A.—There was milk in her bag, but whether she had been milked a short time before I could not tell; the first cow I cut up was very much diseased; her lungs were very much affected; they were full of corruption; the left lobe was the only portion not rotten; the liver was badly diseased.

Q.—Did you ever find any ulcers in the stomach? A.—No.

Q.—Is it true that the butchers prefer the swill-fed cows? A.—The old butchers don't buy them; they don't go there; there's a parcel of shoemakers and Jews that will buy, if they can clear the hide and hoofs—but they are not butchers.

Q.—What is your opinion of the condition of the cattle there? A.—I think they would be better if they were allowed more room, or were allowed to run around.

Q.—Are they fat? A.—Yes, but you can fat a goose under a bed—in fact I believe that is the way they are fattened; but it is not just the place for a cow, if you want to keep her healthy. The witness, after answering a number of other questions, which elicited nothing particularly new, gave place to

Mr. Atchison, who stated that the first cow named had been in the stables only two weeks; one of the cows that died he saw in Mr. Leslie's paper next day, but another that Mr. Leslie had in his paper was in the stable now, and there was not an ulcer on her.

Dr. John Shanks was the next witness. Q.—Where do you reside? A.—No. 254 West Thirty-second-street.

Q.—How is the health of the neighborhood of these stables? A.—At present it will compare most favorably with other parts of the City.

Q.—Have you been in the stables? A.—Yes; I was in them about nine years ago.

Q.—What is your opinion of swill milk? A.—I know nothing of it further than from a report made to the Academy of Medicine.

At this point the following letter was handed to the Chairman of the Committee, and then Mr. Leslie and some of his artists, who were present, left the room.

New-York, Saturday, June 5, 1858.

Alderman Tuomey, Chairman Investigating Committee:

Sir: The course pursued by you, assisted by Mr. Clinton, counsel for the Messrs. Johnson, proprietors of the Sixteenth-street Distillery and Cow-stables, towards myself and the distinguished medical witnesses I have produced before you, compels me to decline subjecting either myself or them to a repetition of the treatment we then received.

I have done my duty in bringing this monstrous nuisance before the public, but perceiving the utter impossibility of getting a just and unbiased hearing before your Committee as it is now constituted, I shall decline proceeding further in conjunction with them.

Yours respectfully,

(Signed,) FRANK LESLIE.

The letter was not read aloud, and there were no remarks upon it.

Alderman Reed handed to Dr. Shanks the analysis of swill-milk made by Prof. Reid, and the analysis of pure milk, as given in Dr. Gardner's report to the Academy, and asked his opinion of them.

Dr. Shanks—I see that there is a difference. I would say that there has never been detected a particle of poisonous or deleterious matter in the swill-milk. In the analysis of swill-milk, I see there is a little less of the butter, which is rather indigestible. Dr. Griscom said, the other day, that country milk was better for children, when diluted with water, and I agree with him; the water would dilute the butter particles, and render it less indigestible. In regard to the coagulum, he did not consider the effect of the warm water, nor what the effect of the gastric juice would be upon it when in the stomach; I should not think that there was anything in the analysis to prove that swill milk is more indigestible than any other.

Alderman Tucker—You do not concur with the current opinion as to the destruction of eight thousand infants by the use of swill-milk? A.—Certainly not; I consider swill-milk a very excellent beverage; and, as to the words in Frank Leslie's paper, they are merely words—words as highly wrought up as a diseased imagination could work them.

Q.—Do you use swill milk? A.—I don't know whether I do or not; I never asked the question; I have lived a long time in that neighborhood.

Q.—Do you know by whom the subject was introduced into the Academy of Medicine? A.—I don't think I should use any names; I have been surprised that it was introduced into a scientific body.

Q.—Why were you surprised? A.—Because I did not think there was any cause for it; I was surprised that it should be taken up at the present time, while there was such a public clamor on the subject; I think a body of scientific men are not to be influenced by public clamor in their opinions of a scientific matter; I see by a report in the New-York Times that the subject was taken up and voted down.

Alderman Tucker—The resolutions, I believe, were taken up and laid on the table, to be taken up again at some other time.

Dr. Shanks—The resolutions appended to the report at the time the subject was thoroughly discussed were voted down; that was about nine years ago.

Q.—Doctor, how long have you practiced in that neighborhood? A.—I have practiced in the Sixteenth, Nineteenth and Twentieth Wards quite a number of years.

Q.—In a sanitary point of view do you think those stables in a densely populated city are healthful? A.—Not in a densely populated city, probably, but if they are to be in the City, I think they are admirably located.

Q.—Do you think the odor is injurious? A.—I do not; I think it is rather agreeable.

Q.—What do you think of the use of the meat of those cows for food? A.—I cannot say anything about the meat.

Robert Watts, Veterinary Surgeon, was called, and testified that the disease appeared first in the country in 1837, but that it was not so prevalent now as it was some years ago; he said that when the disease first appeared here the Doctors could not cure any of the cows taken with it, but that now they could cure seven out of every eight. He was asked whether he would prefer to insure a cow for five years shut up during the whole time in one of the swill stables, or one for the same length of time in the country. He said he would prefer to insure the country-kept cow.

Dr. Augustus K. Gardner sworn: Said he resided at No. 14 East Thirteenth-street, and was a medical practitioner.

Q.—Are you acquainted with, or have you ever visited these stables? A.—Yes.

Q.—For what purpose did you visit them? A.—First from curiosity, and then to satisfy myself in relation to the milk.

Q.—Have you made this swill-milk a study, and do you believe that some six or eight thousand children die annually from its use? A.—I have considered the use of swill milk as one of the causes of the large infant mortality in the City.

Alderman Tucker—We want your opinion as to the deleterious qualities of the milk.

Dr. Gardner—My first visit, as I have said, was from curiosity. I was attracted to the stables by a peculiar smell that I found in the neighborhood. I observed the odor, and, followed my nose, which brought me to the stables. There were some one thousand cows there in Sixteenth street tied or chained by their necks, and I learned that after they were once taken in there they were not taken out until they died. I came to the conclusion that the cows there were not in a state of nature, and that their milk was not of a natural character. I considered that if they were not kept in a natural manner their milk could not be good. I considered that when cows lived naturally, their milk was made as God made it, and that as God made it it was good; and that if their milk was not like it, it must be wrong.

Q.—Has your practice given you any opportunities of judging of the deleterious effects of swill-milk? A.—It is a matter of very great difficulty for a physician to trace where the milk comes from; I suppose it is known that this swill-milk is used for the most part by the poorer classes, and we know that it is among them that there is the greatest mortality.

Q.—Have you known any individual instances where children have been injured by the use of this milk? A.—I have known of many instances where the milk given to children has been changed, and the children have sickened, and that the parents had returned to that they had taken formerly and the children recovered; I know from my own personal knowledge that this has been the case.

Q.—Do you know that the milk that made the children sick was swill-milk? A.—I have been informed by the families that it was; I have never followed up the milk carts to see where they came from; I left that for Mr. Leslie's artists to do.

Q.—How were the cows in the stables when you were there? A.—Some of the cows were healthy, apparently, and some of them were very much diseased; principally they were diseased along the entire of their legs; some had large abscesses on their buttocks; this I found from examination.

Q.—Have you any knowledge of the diseases of cows? A.—Nothing more than I received during a brief visit to the Veterinary School at Alfort, near Paris.

Q.—How long since you have been in these schools? A.—I don't think I have been in them for four years.

Q.—Did you find many of them with ulcerated sores? A.—Many.

Q.—Did they milk them? A.—They milked some of them, and when I spoke about the milk, the man said that sores away up there (pointing to their haunches) could not hurt milk that was down in the bag.

Q.—At what time did you make the principal part of your examinations? A.—About nine years ago; there were carts standing there labelled "Westchester," "Orange County," &c.

Q.—What would be the effect of country milk, kept until it was sour, and then fed to a child? A.—It would produce diarrhœa unless it was thrown off.

Q.—Do you believe it possible to take a child from its birth and feed it constantly with swill milk for a number of years and have it appear the picture of health? A.—If the child was of a very strong constitution, and of healthy and vigorous parents, with every other circumstance favorable, such a thing might occur, but it would be a remarkable case.

The different analyses were shown to the witness.

Q.—The Committee wish to know which of these would be the most healthful for a child? A.—The mother's milk is the most healthful milk for a child. Cow's milk has two or three nutritive ingredients, setting aside the chemicals—the phosphates which go to make up the bones and tissues of the body. They are butter, cheese and sugar. The cheese is the most difficult of digestion for the child. Cow's milk contains say twice the cheese and half the sugar of mother's milk. To make it digestible for a child, it must be diluted, one half with water, and have sugar added to it. Distillery milk contains just twice as much cheese as pure cow's milk, and is consequently much more indigestible. The analysis before me does not agree exactly with the analysis Professor Reid made for me when I was making up my report to the Academy of Medicine.

Alderman Reed—How about the bill that is attached there, Doctor? You see it is $30, and there has been some talk about it. A.—Well, it is exactly the amount he chargd me for analyzing five different qualities of milk.

Alderman Reed—Well, if the chemists that are analyzing milk for us now do not charge us any more than that, we will be satisfied.

Q.—Do you consider Professor Reed an able chemist? A.—He was at the time he made the analysis for me.

In answer to several questions from the City Inspector in relation to the disease of the cows, and the time necessary to its development, the Doctor stated that he thought it was epidemic pneumonia, and that they might die of it in a few days; and he added, that that kind of disease would be present where such conditions exist.

Q.—Are you a member of the Academy of Medicine? A.—I am.

Q.—Were not the resolutions attached to your report presented about nine years ago voted down? A.—They were, because some of the members did not like their phraseology.

Q.—Did you present the resolutions at the meeting of the Academy the other evening, that is reported in the Times? A.—I did.

Q.—Were they voted down? A.—There was no question taken on the merits of the resolutions; they were laid on the table for the present; there was some discussion of the subject matter, but I think there was no member careless enough to express the opinion that swill-milk is good milk.

Q.—In a sanitary point of view, what is your opinion of swill-milk stables, such as we have here, in a densely-populated city? A.—I think that, as they are conducted, they should be pronounced a nuisance; the odor is bad; the milk is deleterious, and the meat is poisonous.

Q.—Is there anything in the swill itself to make the cows sick? A.—If fed hot, (I saw some of it fed to them so hot that I could not bear my finger in it) fed in that way it would make them sick, but I don't think that if the cows were kept in the country, and fed upon hay, grass, and other natural food, a little cold swill would hurt them much, if you could get them to eat it.

Q.—What would be the effect of the swill upon them then? A.—It would excite them, and they would give more milk than would be consistent with their strength. It would have the same effect upon them as beer upon a nursing woman.

At this point the Committee adjourned over to Tuesday, at 1 P. M.

Outrages.

BOARDING OF THE BRIG LILLIAN.

The brig Lillian, Captain Nichols, arrived at this port from Black River, Jamaica, on Saturday morning, with a cargo of logwood, and reports that he was boarded by a British war-steamer on the 23d ult., when ten miles east from Sombrero Key. The steamer was painted lead color, and was no doubt the Styx. Coming up with the brig she hoisted the British colors, and placed herself in the vessel's track, so that she was obliged to heave to. A boat then came on board, and the officer in charge asked the name of the vessel, where she was from, where bound, and asked to see the papers. Capt. Nichols produced them, and, after a slight examination, the officer told him it was all right, and he could proceed. The boat then left, and Capt. Nichols filled away, and continued on his voyage. There was nothing in the case to mark it from others which have been reported.

ANOTHER.

Capt. Revans of the brig Abram, from Savanilla via Key West, May 25th, reports, May 26th, off Sambro Key, was boarded by a boat from the British war steamer Styx, and papers overhauled; was asked where from and bound, number of crew, as to clearance, &c., "at the same time with politeness."

This is the brig which was referred to in the account received by the Isabel at Charleston a few days ago. The brig stopped to land some passengers at Key West, who were taken off by a pilot-boat, and she then continued on her voyage. The last seen of the steamer Styx was in full chase. The effrontery of this particular case consisted, it was alleged, in boarding and examining the vessel within the maritime jurisdiction of the United States. So far as the manner in which the search was conducted, Capt. Revans made no complaint of it, the officer being very civil.

BOARDED BY A SPANISH WAR-STEAMER.

The bark Tanaro, Capt. Arey, from Havana, May 21, with Sugar, &c., to M. Trujillo, arrived yesterday. On the evening of May 21, when off Havana, he was boarded by a boat from a Spanish War Steamer. The officer in command desired to see the vessel's clearance, which was shown him, and he departed, having been remarkably civil and polite.

The Affair off Pensacola.

Augusta, Saturday, June 5.

No further information has yet come to hand concerning the reported firing into of an American vessel off Pensacola.

Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.—We were shown a telegram yesterday morning from Cincinnati, Ohio, stating that the slight damage caused by the extreme high waters of the Wabash River at Vincennes has been repaired, and that trains are now running regularly and on time from Cincinnati to St. Louis, via that popular route, the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Fees of District-Attorneys—Glaring Inequality in the Distribution of Government Offices—A queer Lobby Scheme—Ocean Mail Transportation, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Washington, Wednesday, June 2, 1858.

In response to an inquiry from Secretary Cobb, Attorney-General Black to-day sent in a communication to the Treasury Department, giving his opinion in reference to certain cases arising in the office of the United States District-Attorney of the Southern District of New-York. Certain actions were brought against collectors and others, in which Mr. McKeon appeared for the defence, but gave place to Mr. Sedgwick, while the actions were still pending. The following was the substance of Mr. Cobb's inquiries:

1. Can the District-Attorney, in any case, charge more for his service than the fee-bill expressly allows him to receive?

2. What is the rule by which he is to be compensated for the class of cases mentioned above?

3. Is the late District-Attorney bound to turn over these cases, like other official business, to his successor?

To the first question Attorney-General Black returns a positive and direct negative. When a duty is enjoined on the District-Attorney by the law of his office, and not merely by the request of a department, he is bound to perform it, and take the compensation which the law gives him, or resign. The subject is not open to a new bargain between him and any other officer of the Government. All criminal prosecutions, and all civil suits in which the United States are a party of record, fall within this principle. "I cannot make out," says the Attorney-General, "in any way satisfactory to my own mind the ingenious distinction which would pay an officer as attorney, what the fee-bill gives, and then pay him besides a quantum meruit for managing the same as counsel." The act of 1853 enables the District-Attorney to receive "for services rendered at the request of any head of department, such sum as may be agreed on." But this case only occurs when his authority to appear in such a case, and his duty to manage it, arise out of, and are created by, the request of a department. But the Attorney-General says.

"On the whole, I am very clear that the services of a District-Attorney, or other counsel, in a suit defending officers for special acts are, and must always be, rendered at the request of the head of a Department; and the legal compensation allowed for them in the fee-bill is such sum as may be agreed on. Services for examination of land titles, and generally all professional assistance which may be needed by any of the Departments, fall within the same rule. No accounting officer should allow a charge under this item of the fee-bill, unless the claimant produces a certificate that the services were rendered at the request of a Department, that the sum charged was agreed on, either before or afterwards; and it should also be made to appear that the services were not of such a character that he was legally bound to give them, without a request. In such cases, his compensation is not ascertained by agreement, but by the fee-bill. Such is the construction which the fee-bill of 1853 has always received, and the Act of 1856 does not change it. This act accomplishes the purpose of preventing the District-Attorney from retaining more than $6,000 a year for his own personal services."

On the third point, the Attorney-General says it is for the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion to decide whether an out-going attorney shall cease all connection with pending suits against Collectors. His right to order them all into the hands of a newly-appointed officer, cannot be doubted, but the Attorney-General suggests that the better way would be, in cases prepared by the late Attorney, to employ him as assistant counsel.

The Morse rifle people are log rolling to obtain the passage of an appropriation of $100,000, to be used in altering old flint-lock muskets into breech-loading rifles of the Morse pattern. They allege that the alterations can be made for $2 50 or $3 per gun. This is a gross misstatement, intended to deceive Congress. The best gunsmiths who have examined the work, declare that the necessary alteration will cost $7 or $8 per gun; and furthermore, that the gun when altered, is dangerous and unfit for service. The only cheap manner in which flint-lock muskets can be altered and rendered properly efficient, is to make them equal to the pattern of 1855. This can be done by rifling the bore, and substituting a primer or percussion-lock for the flint-lock. This alteration will cost about $5; and the gun is then a splendid weapon for infantry. No breech-loading gun is fit for infantry; this is the opinion of the best military authorities in this country and Europe. The percussion-musket rifled, is the best arm for infantry ever invented, and the only weapon which is worth anything against cavalry. Sharpe's and Morse's rifles are well enough for riflemen, but entirely unfit for heavy infantry.

The lobby are exerting themselves with almost superhuman activity to get their various projects through before the session closes. To name all the schemes afloat, would require too much time. The gun-lobby, is perhaps, as largely represented as any other one interest, but the steamship crowd is large and active. Private claimants are numerous; and an active railroad land-grant lobby has just made its appearance.

Mr. Collins is largely interested in getting through the Ocean Mail Transportation bill; but it will be beaten in the House, if the Senate gives that body another chance at it, by amending it so that it must be sent back. The principal obstacle in the way of the new project before the Senate Committee for the establishment of a line of iron mail steamships, making weekly departures from this side, alternating between New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Charleston and New-Orleans, and arriving from Southampton, at one or other of the above ports weekly, alternating between them, is the purpose announced by J. Glancy Jones, on the part of the Administration, to make an entire revision of the postal system, but wait till next session before they begin it. The proposition before the Senate, which is made by Ambrose W. Thompson, is an important one, and contemplates a National Ocean Mail line of steamships.

The President tells almost every member who goes near him that he will not be hurried in signing bills, and that he shall adhere to the rule laid down in his Message, requiring all important bills to be presented to him three days before the adjournment. Under these circumstances I am inclined to think a short extension of the session will be absolutely necessary, since I do not perceive how all the necessary bills can be handed to him in time.

Mr. Robert Smith's report from the Select Committee to apportion the clerks and messengers in the several departments of the Government, contains some very interesting facts, and strikes at a patent and growing abuse. There are now employed, in the service of the Executive Department and Bureaus of the Government, in all, 1,320 persons, in the several classes of clerks and messengers. If appointed in an equal ratio, from the States and Territories, each Congressional District, Territory and the District of California would have five appointments, leaving a fraction of 110 to be appointed at large. This is briefly, how things would be, if this equal rule were observed; it will surprise many, if not most of your readers, to find out how they are. The following table exhibits the number of clerks and other persons employed from each State; and the aggregate amount of their salaries:

The District of Columbia has, besides all this, 43 temporary appointments, making in all 425, when she is entitled only to five! To increase still further this astonishing disparity, a well-known fact ought to be stated, namely, that very many persons are actually appointed from this District, but credited to some State which has not got her share; thus uniting a piece of injustice with a piece of fraud. In this manner also, Virginians and Marylanders are appointed, claiming to be from some other State. This crowd of pensioners on the Government, in the District, are in fact, for the most part, Virginians and Marylanders—a great part of them broken down F. F. V.'s, sometimes including whole families, fathers, mothers, sons and daughters, seedy, but proud, too lazy or lofty to get a living in any other way, and regarding these Government places as their birthright. The Committee propose gradually to abolish this abuse, and finally to have the favors of the Government distributed among the States with some degree of impartiality and equality. The attempt will, of course, create intense alarm and disgust here, among the people of the District, but few of whom are not either actually employed, or have relatives employed, under the Government. Of course, nothing will be done this session, but it is to be hoped that the constituents of honorable members will not let them forget these matters at the next.

Congressional Manners—Scenes in the House and Senate.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Washington, Thursday, June 3, 1858.

I do not know that I can conscientiously assert that Congressional manners are deteriorating, but certainly they are not improving. Fifteen years ago, I remember, an uneducated and vulgar man, from Ohio, was in the habit of eating his dinner in the House, and wiping his hands on the top of his head, which was bald. A humorous Irishman happened to observe this habit of the unsophisticated republican, and furnished the public with a Daguerreotype view of the scene in print, which he signed "Persimmon." The acidity and astringency of the fruit in a green state were not sharper than the sting of the description, and the unhappy correspondent was expelled the House. The frequent fights of Wise, Stanley, Rathbun and others, about the same time, supply further comments upon the standard of intercourse among gentlemen, which was then regarded as Congressional comity. Coming down nearer to the present day, we have as an illustration of progress, the assault by Brooks and Keitt upon Mr. Sumner, and the free fight of last February, commenced by Keitt and ended by Potter.

I am not now a frequent visitor to the Capitol, but I seldom go to either House without seeing or hearing something which serves

"To show the very age and body of the times."

Last evening at 6 o'clock I had ocular and auricular evidence of the march of refinement amidst the assembled wisdom and worth of the nation. As the scene possibly will not be reported, I will describe it.

About two-thirds of the members were present. Many were going to or returning from dinner. One-fourth of those in their places were on their feet, screaming "Mr. Speaker!" and flourishing bills or resolutions as if that instant were the crisis of each respective life. Mr. Smith of Virginia—distinguished in the pleasant colloquialism of the House, as Extra Billy, from some peculiarity of his early years, connected with the disbursements of the Post-Office Department—had erected himself a barrier to all business by objecting to every man's proposition, frantically ejaculating, while tossing his arms like the yards of a ship in a storm—"gentlemen, you just let me through, and you may go on." These words were a key to the scene. Some member had objected to a bill patronized by the member from Virginia, and he avenged himself by punishing the whole House.

While the storm was at its height, Mr. Harris, Chairman of the Committee on Elections, announced that he rose to a question of privilege. The foam and yeast subsided, and Mr. Harris proceeded a very little way in exposition of the claims of Mr. Kingsbury, delegate from the lapsed and extinguished Territory of Minnesota, to retain his seat, when he yielded to a member from Indiana for explanation. Instantly, Mr. Hughes, of Indiana, sprang to his feet, objecting to Mr. Harris yielding the floor, upon the ground that he could not thus farm out the privilege of speaking on the question. Mr. Harris mildly explained that he had no desire to restrict the rights of other gentleman, and was only following custom in giving way for interpolation. The Speaker confirmed his right to yield for explanations.

Mr. Hughes still objected, and charged Harris with a deliberate purpose to confine debate, by an abuse of his own privilege, to a particular set of his friends and pet opponents. Then ensued these remarks:

Mr. Harris—The gentleman has no right to charge me with that design, nor to throw out any such intimation.

Mr. Hughes—The gentleman from Illinois has heretofore done so, and means to do so now.

Mr. Harris—There is no authority for that statement.

Mr. Hughes—The statement is true.

Mr. Harris—The statement is false.

Mr. Hughes—You are a liar.

There was no unusual excitement when these euphonious epithets were uttered. Mr. Harris said a few words upon the imputation of falsehood, which gained no attention, and the matter passed off, "all quiet and comfortable," as Mr. Weller would have observed.

Nor are the maxims of decorum better defined or practiced in the Senate. Day before yesterday Mr. Chandler, of Michigan, referred to a letter from Gen. Totten, inclosing an estimate of the cost of improving St. Clair Flats. The following explanation took place:

Mr. Jefferson Davis—That is not an estimate.

Mr. Chandler—Why?

Mr. Davis—It is not prepared by the Secretary of War.

Mr. Chandler—It is sent here by the Secretary. When the Senator from Mississippi was Secretary did he ever with his own hand write an estimate, or did he adopt those of the head of the bureau?

Mr. Davis—The question is impertinent and silly.

Mr. Chandler—Your answer is impertinent!

A few minutes afterward Mr. Chandler rose and stated that he had not heard the epithet silly, which he now learned had been applied to the question. He now rose to say that he regarded that addition as insolent and impudent.

Mr. Davis—You know your redress.

Mr. Chandler—(Sneeringly)—Redress!

Even this does not approach in coarseness the passage between Green and Cameron, a month ago.

A reformation is needed, but we shall have none while in a course of such rapid expansion that the rudeness of the frontier balances or suppresses the courtesies which spring from settled life, education, and the refinements of polished society. Very few of the class of men conventionally known as "gentlemen" in European countries are sent to Congress. The number of such in truth is fewer than half a century ago. A.

The Proceedings of the British Government in Searching American Ships.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Regarded in any light, the British search of our vessels in the Gulf is at once a subject of mystery and curiosity. Just when our relations with England are of the most friendly character, the bonds of commercial union drawing closer and closer, and ships of war of both nations are engaged in taking on board what it is hoped will be the means of instantaneous communication, we are startled by a succession of most extraordinary acts on the part of Her Majesty's officers in the immediate neighborhood of our own coast. Each days' arrivals swell the list, till vessels to the number of forty report a stoppage on the high seas, enforced by guns of British cruisers, to whose officers they have been compelled to give an account of themselves and of their cargoes. It matters little in what manner the inquisition was conducted—we are willing to make all allowance for exaggeration, and rest our cause on the simple fact that such stoppage has been made.

On the announcement of the first few cases, all complaining of the same vessel, charity accounted for it in the ignorance or stupidity of some individual officer, whose conduct would be immediately disavowed, himself removed, and ample reparation offered. It would be hard to tell whether astonishment or regret was most prominent, when, by reports from other vessels which had been subjected to the same indignity from other hands, showing a concerted action on the part of the British fleet, this opinion was rendered untenable. To such an extent has the search been carried that vessels lying quietly in port have met as rigorous cross-questioning as those upon the seas, and in one instance so near did they approach a collision that a boat's crew of armed men were warned not to set foot on the deck of an American ship, by the Captain, who drew a revolver in defence of his rights. Is it to be wondered at that these outrages, so often repeated, should rouse a spirit of resentment in the American people, or that they should indignantly demand an explanation and an apology?

As yet, no reasonable hypothesis has been offered why this aggravating course on the part of the British Government has been adopted. The ostensible reason is the suppression of the Slave-trade which has been carried on under our flag, but he must be easily duped who can see in this flimsy pretext a satisfactory answer. Were the search limited to one or two vessels, whose appearance and character might in any way justify suspicion, no such general feeling of insult would have arisen; in such a case, protests might have been entered and a diplomatic war of words would have ended the matter without eliciting popular enmity. But when the search extends to all vessels, great and small, and in cases where a glance from a seaman's eye shows a slave-deck to be an impossibility, no diplomacy or suavity will serve as a salve to wounded honor, and the inquiry is hurriedly and angrily sent to the Court of St. James "Why are these things done?" coupled with the stern request that they instantly cease. It may be well for both nations that no Andrew Jackson sits in the President's chair to take the responsibility, or Great Britain might be startled at an order given to some American frigate to seize the Buzzard and the Styx and bring them prizes to our port, or, in case of resistance, to sink them as pirates on the spot. It is dangerous playing with edge-tools, and England knows full well the stand-point of the American Government on this subject. Does she suppose that a country whose resources have been so marvelously developed, whose population has so greatly increased, which has risen from the rank of a third-rate power to that of one of the greatest nations of the earth, will more readily permit the insult than when, in 1812, it went to war on the same grounds? Is it a deliberate insult or only one of those sharp turns in the circumlocution office that our transatlantic cousins so frequently make? That Great Britain will apologize and attempt to explain we have little doubt, but there are weighty reasons why she should set a perpetual guard against its possible recurrence in the future.

However it may be disguised, it cannot be concealed, that the United States have had no enemy worthy of the name but England. In her early history France lent a sympathizing ear, and the memory of Lafayette is linked with that of Washington. Every school history of the Revolution, every romance touching upon the early existence of the Republic, is eloquent upon the story of wrongs committed by the British soldiery, or at the instigation of British officers. We live over again the scenes of that period as we read the record. We go with the rebels from Bunker's Hill rejoicing, though defeated, and march with flashing eye and flushed cheek by the side of the victorious Washington, while our hearts shrink with horror from those who armed the savage Indian, and set him, in cruel strife, to war upon women and children with the torch and the tomahawk. Notwithstanding our good will, these feelings will arise, for war, in its mildest shape, contains much of brutality, and it is England's misfortune that our contests have been with her upon our own soil, and the blood that was shed upon the hearth-stone leaves an ugly stain that is not easily washed out. How long will it be before the people of Sebastopol recognize England or France as their friends, and how many treaties will be necessary to efface the recollection of battered dwellings and desolated homes?

The American poeple, however, were and are trying to forget old injuries; even old men, who in 1814, hearing of the ruthless destruction of the Capitol by the incendiary soldiery, left the plow and eagerly offered themselves for the defence of their country, were ready to find an excuse, and teach their grand-children how all these things were changed. Was it prudent, was it wise, to stir up these latent fires and heat the blood once more to the boiling point? Are we never to forget that nearly fifty years ago our ships were boarded and American citizens pressed into the service of the British navy? Or is it to be the settled policy of the British Government to advance claims it cannot sustain, and adopt lines of action from which it must inevitably retreat, regardless of that harmony and good feeling it professes itself so anxious to promote? It will take years to restore in the masses of our people, the bone and sinew of our populace, who read of these outrages and brood over them in their cabins when the day's labor is ended, that confidence in the sincerity of England's friendship they tend so strongly to shake—let it never be forgotten that we are a nation of sovereigns, and each man feels every insult as directly intended for himself.

Nor must the powers of the old world estimate our strength as they do their own. The nation whose every citizen is a soldier, and whose every seaman is a member of its navy, is never weak. When danger threatens, party lines sink into oblivion, and all rally for defence, and an enemy will find that a true Republic counts its ships by thousands, its army by millions, and its treasure as inexhaustible. The Search Question.

New-York, Friday, June 4, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the Times of to-day, I see several letters on that vexata questio. One of them, that signed "Jus," contains an extremely forcible remark, only I think it might, with more propriety, be used as an argument in support of the other side of the question. He quotes Sir Robert Peel's speech in 1842. Now I have not read the context of that speech, but either Sir Robert Peel was indulging in a vein of irony, or else laboring under a mild form of insanity, for I cannot otherwise account for his saying such a palpable absurdity.

If slavers, under an American, were not to be searched because they were under that flag, what do you think would be the state of the slave-trade at the end of a few years? How many slaves would be imported into America under that free and glorious flag of America? Where would be the use of sending out cruisers at all, if they could only search vessels bearing foreign flags? And if England was not to look after the slave-trade, are there any persons so utterly blind as to assert that the United States would do it?

These considerations have been already slightly touched upon by "Derwent," in his letter to you of the same date. They cannot, I should think, be laid too strongly before the public. In answer to "Mercator's" "washy article," I would beg leave to state, that I have not supposed pirates sailing under the English flag, because the thing is next to impossible, on account of the vigilance of the English in regard to them, and the fleet of ships that guard the English commerce. How many vessels did the Americans keep in the Gulf for the purpose of suppressing slavery? It strikes me that, to use an old proverb, "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander;" in other words, where a British man-of-war would allow a merchant vessel to pass unchallenged, there she might very probably let a slaver pass.

If you consider that these lines are worthy of a line or two in your valuable paper, by inserting them you will much oblige F. A. W.

The Mammoth Opera Scheme.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Mr. P. T. Barnum, in answering the "Opera-Goer," does not establish a case against a position not to be overthrown. Mr. P. T. Barnum intimates that English opera-goers pay willingly sixty per cent. more than would be imposed upon the public of New-York at the price of five dollars. But does he consider and put in account the difference between the two opera-frequenting publics?

In London the opera is given during the "season"—that is, during those three months when the wealthy of the wealthiest country in the world gather there principally for amusement.

Besides, opera-going in London, as all over Europe, is a refined social duty, as well as a pleasure. It is the conditio sine quâ non of society. Everybody goes to the opera to enjoy the music, the elegant gathering, and to see others, as they would at a private party, a reception, &c. The highest, the wealthiest classes, the Court, diplomats, men in elevated official standings, &c., as well as bankers and all money and business men, go to the opera.

Such a community, as well as such a want, does not exist in New-York. The opera is supported principally by the inhabitants, and by the floating population. The richest classes do not frequent the opera. It is a positive fact that men and families averaging the greatest incomes do not spend a dollar to support the opera. It is a positive fact that a well-known family, owning, through all its numerous members, about one-sixth of the whole City of New-York—that this family, all in all, does not spend a hundred dollars yearly for the opera. Its head, who draws a couple of millions of income from houses and stores supported partly by the opera, does not spend a single cent on it. And so it is with most other nabobs of our City. Few, if any, are exceptions to the rule. Not ten young men of independent fortunes, representing the jeunesse dorée of our City, can be counted among the standing supporters of opera. They appear there from time to time—that is all. Such, also, is the case with the beauty, fashion and distinction of our good, best and most superlative blood. These silly lionesses of society frequent opera only on great occasions; at other times preferring the "Lancers," or cosy and independent flirtations in parlors or the streets. There are many families, also, that enjoy incomes of fifteen or twenty thousand dollars a year, who only go to the opera when they get a ticket from one of the stockholders.

It is the small fortunes that fill the opera; Americans, as well as Germans, Italians and Frenchmen. This was witnessed during the past season. A ticket at five dollars would amount to fifteen or twenty dollars for a small family. It is a barefaced imposition to force them, with a dagger at the throat, to pay so much, or else be deprived of an enjoyment which they are the only ones to truly appreciate. POPULUS.

The Brooklyn Ferry-Boats.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Allow me to call your attention to a few important facts, from which the public have long suffered. I refer to the state of the Ferry-boats plying between this City and Brooklyn, during wet weather. During a rain-storm, or even a shower, the passengers crossing on these boats are compelled to suffer more wet than they receive outside. Entering one of these boats on a rainy day, the first thing that salutes your nasal organs is an immense steam rising from the floor and steam pipes beneath the seats; also, an intolerable warmed stench, both disgusting and unfit to breathe. The cushions on the off side of the cabin are all rolled up somewhere out of the way of the water, which comes raining through the covering overhead, and making one vast canal of the whole length of the seat. Gentlemen, of course, resign their seats to the ladies, and then are compelled to go outside and buffet the wind and rain, which is far more preferable than remaining inside with their umbrellas up, (which I have seen frequently done,) and bear the overwhelming stench arising from the steam, floor, umbrellas, &c. Now, Mr. Editor, can this be borne with anything like Christian fortitude? Should our wives and daughters be compelled to stand this horrible stench? And this is the "ladies' cabin!" It is too much, after paying them the price demanded, and then be obliged to suffer thus, at times when we most need protection and comfort. I refer principally to the Wall-street Ferry, and if you have never crossed at such times, only try it once, and see if you do not coincide with W. S. H.

Swill-Fed Cattle and Hogs.

Friday, May 28, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Whilst you are so laudably engaged in the present warfare against the manufacture and use of swill-milk, and are determined to protect the public in every way by warning them of the poisonous effects of that decidedly deleterious food, allow a subscriber to suggest the extension of your investigation to the very large number of swill-fed cattle daily arriving from Western distilleries, and of course are daily dealt out to our uninformed families by the various butchers and others in the trade.

I am told as a fact that the distilleries in Ohio are very numerous and large, and keep constantly on hand from 500 to 2,000 head of cattle each which are constantly moving towards our market. As to hogs one establishment is said to turn out 30,000 per annum.

'Tis needless for me to comment—as you can very readily through your extensive channels of information reach with much accuracy the important fact, which certainly ought to have publicity. As a subscriber to your highly valuable and useful paper, I should derive much gratification from perusing your article on these items. Very respectfully,

The Supply of Milk for the City—How it can be made Good.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The subject of Milk has of late occupied so much public attention, and is inherently of so much importance, that any scheme which looks to furnishing pure country milk is worthy of examination, and if adopted with successful results, is a public benefaction.

The writer, during many years' residence in this City, had opportunity to test the difficulty of procuring country milk at all, or if obtained, without a liberal washing with Croton water, and now residing in the country, away from all Swill-Milk poison factories, he knows experimentally the value of "Milk as is Milk."

But the question is not now so much as to the disease—that all understand; the question is what is the Remedy?

While the writer will not presume to say he has found the remedy, yet he is confident there are means which are entirely feasible, and which may to a great extent work a radical change for the better.

The first proposition may seem so new and revolutionary as to be startling, but unless it is adopted, no certainty can ever be realized of getting better served than has been the case heretofore.

Then let no housekeeper buy milk from any wagon whatever.

Now whatever may be urged on the subject, no scheme that looks to the long-standing mode of peddling, can be depended upon for supplying pure milk, for in the first place the cost of the operation (including hire of man, wear and tear of horse and wagon) must materially enhance the price, and if the dealer is honest, the peddler has abundant opportunity of supplying Croton water in solution, besides the churning of some gallons of milk in the hot sun for several hours over the pavement.

It must be apparent to the commonest understanding that six cents per quart for milk delivered at the doors will not pay for Pure Country Milk, and there is no such thing as putting down a fact by any amount of reasoning or pretension.

The whole thing may be easily managed, if those who desire a good article will take the trouble to send for it.

Now, suppose the peddling abandoned, and grocers do the business—how will it operate?

The milk is taken from the railroad station early in the morning, and, on arriving at the grocery or other dépôt, the can is set in a refrigerator to be kept cool and quiet, and customers call for it as wanted.

The expense of man, horse and wagon, for several hours is saved, and one inducement to adulterate is abated.

It may be said, in objection, that the local dealer may practice the same arts as the peddlers of villainous compounds now called milk. But, while this is true in part, the economy of the mode is an inducement to give a pure article; besides, there are reputable persons enough to keep good milk, as well as other articles of diet, and a man with a "habitation and a name" seems to be more responsible than one who passes a little while before us, and his location is unknown.

Let but this plan be adopted, and buyers of milk be as painstaking to secure a good pure article as ladies are to get a cheap bargain in dry goods, and a long step is taken in the direction of reform.

WESTCHESTER.

A City Scene.

New-York, Wednesday, June 2, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have just witnessed what only the evidence of my own senses would have made me believe possible, even in your wretchedly-governed City.

In other countries, I have seen both the inhumation and the exhumation of victims, in the one case of the cholera, in the other of the plague. I have nowhere seen such beastly disregard of human sympathies and hygienic caution, as is displayed in the disinterments now going on near the junction of Fourth-avenue and Fiftieth-street.

The bodies have been buried there in rows and piles, in long ditches, a few feet beneath the surface. Before the soft pine coffins have had time to decay in a moist soil, the ditches, reeking with the products of decomposed humanity, are exposed to the broad glare of day, and the full action of a Summer sun.

When they have been quite denuded of their slender coverings of earth, the coffins are deliberately split open, and their contents, more or less decayed, (the very shavings that made the pauper's shroud, retaining their curl, bedrabbled in corruption,) literally and exactly speaking, shoveled out, to be packed again in square receptacles of board loosely nailed together, for the purpose of being carted, in open day, to some other place of deposit—perhaps (who knows?) a poudrette or patent guano factory.

In one instance I saw a body, yet entire, converted, perhaps by disease, into a substance partly fungus and partly of the nature of adipocere, chopped up by the shovel, in order to its removal and package in the offal boxes, bit by bit!

This done, in open day, in the midst of a populous neighborhood, with crowds of men and children looking on, having open access from the streets in all directions!

Need I say that it was needful to keep to windward of the open trenches in which this work was going on? What but disease and death can the breezes laden with its exhalations be diffusing through all that neighborhood?

Have the men under whose direction this work is going on no respect for decency? no feeling for their kind? no regard for man? no fear of God?

You are teaching human beings, by such doings, to live like beasts and die like beasts. The city where it is possible deserves, and in my mind and memory shall retain, the designation of A BEASTLY CITY.

A Native, but not a Resident, of New-York.

The Season in Connecticut.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Salisbury, Conn., Thursday, June 3, 1858.

Summer may now be said to be fairly inaugurated with us, and is giving us good promises as to the future. Our corn, which the cold wet season of '57 obliged us to replant, is coming on finely from the first seed; the fruit trees are blooming very fully—indeed more so than in any season for some years; grass has a good start, and is now stretching along at a great rate; our early Mercers and Junes are about ready for their first weeding, and indeed all Nature gives promise of a sure reward to the husbandman.

This is also the month when mother earth puts on her most attractive habiliments—when, if she does not succeed in decoying you into the green fields and silent fastnesses of the forest to cull the wild flower and listen to the sweet carol of her songsters—(no five dollars for tickets here)—you must, to say the least, have a heart which is in a degree insensible to the beauties of Nature.

To the farmer the present is a season of toil and watchfulness; the seed intrusted to the earth requires constant care to keep down the noxious weeds and loosen the earth about the growing plants, reminding us, at times, most forcibly of the ancient curse, (but yet by no means obsolete,) "By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread." Morris and Essex Railroad.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

From the recent conduct of the Directors of this Road, one would be led to the conclusion that they were doing everything in their power to destroy what little popularity they ever enjoyed, and at the same time sacrifice the interest of the stockholders. By performing the farce of annually electing themselves, they have become emboldened, and think they can ill-treat their patrons and nullify their written agreements with impunity. Their last attempt has been on the citizens of Orange, about 6,000 in number, and to whom they were indebted for more than half their passengers, by raising the price of passage 50 per cent., and in place of adding to the number of cars, borrowed of the New-Jersey Railroad, and have, in fact, withdrawn part of the facilities previously granted them. The extension of the Road beyond Morristown, added to the folly of taking a large interest in the Bloomfield Branch, has so crippled their means, that, on the plan of some tailors, who make their honest customers pay for the clothing supplied to rogues, they have endeavored to compel their patrons on the old Road to make good the losses on what they considered improvements. The people of Orange, not feeling disposed to submit to such imposition, and finding it useless to reason with these Life Directors, have established an omnibus line, running from that place to Newark nine times daily, returning on the arrival of trains from New-York. They have thus become independent of the Railroad. In order to raise the value of property beyond Orange, there has been established, for the time being, what is called an express train to Morristown, running the enormous distance of 22 miles, immediately followed by another train of two cars. The Company also run what is called a mail train to Hackettstown, a place found, with difficulty, on the map of New-Jersey.

If this were all, travellers might submit. But one case in which they nullified their written and recorded obligations should be mentioned. When this road was built, a party at Orange, not wishing to sell the right of way, offered it gratis, provided the Company would order the passenger train to stop at a given point to accommodate those who resided in the neighborhood, to which they agreed by a written contract, and it was called the Brick Church Station. This agreement has been fulfilled until the present season—thereby inducing many persons to purchase lands and build valuable houses in the vicinity, trusting to the honor of the Directors; but now they refuse to stop the Express Train anywhere at Orange. Unless the stockholders, at the annual election next month, unite for the desirable purpose of turning out at least a portion of the present Directors, the stock will soon be on a par with that of Harlem, and no dividend need be expected, unless money is borrowed for the purpose of paying one. ORANGE.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Rogues' Portrait Gallery.

It is known to most, that in the office of the detective force of the Metropolitan Police in this City, a collection of ambrotype "counterfeit presentments" of the most noted criminals who have brought themselves within the ken and custody of justice, is kept on exhibition for the public good. The device is, so far as we know, original, and took its rise in a suggestion made by Sergeant Lefferts, who commands the detective squad, to the Deputy-Superintendent, about seven months ago. The plan found favor with the Police Commissioners, and under their sanction, has been in operation since November last. The collection now contains several hundred portraits, and is being continually augmented. Each portrait is numbered, and opposite the same number, in a private record kept exclusively for the use of the force, is entered the name and character of the individual represented. In derogation of the practical benefit of the scheme, it might be urged that a plain daguerreotype is, at the best, but an imperfect likeness. How much greater the imperfection when taken under compulsion? In the second place, it is but natural to suppose that the professional thief, pickpocket or burglar, in the desire to escape detection, or prevent suspicion, will have frequent recourse to disguises and such changes in personal appearance as he or she best knows how to effect. An instance of this just occurs to us: It will be remembered by those who attended the trial of a judicial functionary of this City on an indictment for corruption, which took place some two years ago, and led to his resignation, that the principal witness for the prosecution was a woman named Cosgrove, who, by her own avowal, was the wife of a burglar and the associate of robbers. Some short time subsequently, the same woman appeared as suitor in a case heard in the Common Pleas, and so complete was the transformation in look, dress and air, that her identity was doubted, and, in some cases, even denied by persons who had seen her on the former occasion.

In the third place, it may well be made a subject for inquiry how far the general public would be likely to avail themselves of the opportunity thus afforded to become acquainted—in a very harmless way, it is true—with so formidable an array of rascality. And even granting that the public will exhibit the needed amount of interest in the matter, we must then ask how much better qualified a man would be, from looking over some hundreds of these portraits, to discover in his next neighbor in the omnibus an expert pickpocket, to detect in the little boy, who asks to carry his carpet-bag to the steamboat, an incorrigible thief; or to recognize an accomplished operator at the panel game in the handsome young lady on Broadway, who, after the dewy eve has fallen, invites him to partake of the hospitalities of her home?

In the last place, it might be asked how far the plan has been of service to the detectives themselves?—how many rogues have they discovered through it?—how many criminals arrested?—how many burglaries and thefts foiled?

Still the thing has its uses. Some of the portraits are pretty fair specimens of Daguerreotypic art; some, as was doubtless unavoidable, are shocking. On the whole, however, they are probably more true to nature than was Hogarth's picture of that celebrated hero, Jack Sheppard, whom he visited in Newgate, and sketched on his thumb-nail; and that, by the way, is the earliest instance of taking the likeness of a condemned criminal that we remember to have read of. There certainly is a poetic as well as a moral justice exhibited in the fact that these people, whose "deeds are done in the dark," should have their faces, if not their crimes, arrested and exposed by that light which they abhor and shun. The gallery, as it is called, is at present visited occasionally by the curious, who find in Sergeant Lefferts a courteous and intelligent cicerone. But even to the curious, it affords little satisfaction. A more commonplace, and, to all appearances, a more respectable looking set of customers, could not be discovered in the show-case of any Daguerreotypist in the City. Intelligent youth, sober manhood and venerable age, handsome, well-dressed men, attractive and mild-featured women—interspersed with a few, a very few, miserable, sinister-faced vagabonds, make up the collection. The professional thief or burglar looks the least like the conventional notion of the character that could well be imagined. In that he finds his security.

Here, for instance, is No. 18, a nice, well-favored, well-attired youth, named Clegg, only 19 years of age, yet a hopeless desperado, now serving out his term in the State Prison for highway robbery.

No. 21, again, represents an amiable gentlemen of about 30, with a shawl artistically thrown over his shoulder, under which, while he is exhibiting the graces of the court of Louis Quatorze to the fair ladies whom, with one hand, he conducts from the theatre to the omnibus, he is rifling their pockets with the other.

No. 58, is another illustration of the suaviter in modo, fortiter in re. It is the likeness of a young gentleman with a name and several aliases, who has an open look, inclining to swagger, in dress approximates to the dandy, and swindles unsuspecting countrymen by the confidence game, to an extent almost incredible.

No. 63, a venerable personage, with a placid countenance, white hair, and snowy neck-tie, suggestive of the benevolent country pastor, is an experienced pickpocket.

No. 26 represents Mr. Leonard Barker, who looks like a well-to-do merchant, with plenty of money, and strong religious tendencies. He is a notorious counterfeiter.

No. 169, one of the few ill-looking portraits, is a likeness of a desperate old vagabond called "Jew Mike."

No. 164, a Broadway swell, apparently, is Thomas Shannon, a gentleman whose pleasing duty it is to black mail incautious females, who prefer losing their money to their character.

No. 172 is one of our German fellow-citizens, named Rosenthal, who once occupied the pulpit with great acceptance to his congregation, and now handles the jimmy with equal acceptance to himself.

No. 156 is Mrs. Emma Howard and her confederate Flynn, who kidnapped a negro girl, and were arrested, tried, convicted, and sent to the State prison therefor. The woman is quite good-looking; the man nothing remarkable either way.

No. 189 is a likeness of a lady named Mary Ann Allen, alias Ross, if her own statement be true. She is an exceedingly nice person, and one of the most successful members of her lucrative profession, to wit, pocket-picking.

No. 149 is George Garrison, a strapping negro, in a jockey-cap, who operated extensively on "the queer." After his indictment by the grand jury, he became disordered in mind, and was taken from his cell to the Lunatic Asylum, where, probably, he still sojourns.

Besides these, other specimens might be mentioned perhaps equally interesting—among which must be named several female pickpockets, and that interesting young gentleman named Howard, better known as the bogus reporter who, unfortunately, is still at large. To those anxious for fuller information, access to the gallery is, at all times, easy.

The Presbyterians on Marriage.—The New-School Assembly of the Presbyterian Church has decided the case of the marriage of the Rev. Mr. Shields, of Des Moines, adversely to that gentleman. The case has been already stated, but as this decision settles a point in Presbyterian discipline, it is worth while to give the story complete: Mr. Shields married, some time since, a lady who had moved to Iowa from Massachusetts. Upon arriving in Iowa she applied for a divorce, upon the ground that the conduct of her husband towards her had been so violent and unjust that she had to flee from his roof—and that, though thus compelled by his conduct to quit his roof, he had refused to provide for her, and thus he had abandoned her. This application for divorce rested entirely upon her own testimony; and not being resisted, a divorce was granted, divorcing her from her husband. Shortly after, she and the Rev. Mr. Shields were married. The Presbytery of Des Moines took the matter into consideration, and while admitting the legality of the divorce under the laws of Iowa, they decided that there had not been sufficient cause shown, in a Scriptural point of view, to justify the parties marrying. Therefore they deposed Mr. Shields. The action of the Presbytery was reviewed by the Synod of Iowa, and they restored Mr. Shields to his ministerial functions.

The Rev. Thompson Bird brought the matter to the attention of the General Assembly upon a complaint against the action of the Synod, and the matter has been debated pro and con. for several days. The result is as we have stated—the action of the Presbytery has been indorsed, and, consequently, that of the Synod disapproved. The matter was referred to a Committee to prepare a minute in accordance with this action.

Terrible Disaster in Illinois.

THE VILLAGE OF ELLISON DESTROYED BY A TORNADO—TWENTY-FIVE PERSONS KILLED—FIFTY OTHERS FATALLY INJURED.

The Chicago papers have full particulars of the fearful devastation of the village of Ellison by a whirlwind. A brief account of this disaster was given in our telegrams on Wednesday.

The number of persons killed, so far as known, is twenty five; and from fifty to sixty others are badly injured. The following are the names of killed and wounded:

Killed—Martin Wenworth, Mary McWilliams, Lucy McWilliams, Mrs. Thompson and child, Mrs. Brazleton and child, Mrs. Hand and child, Master Hand, 14 years of age, unknown married woman, William Thompson, Mr. Johnson, Misses Johnson, two sisters; S. Johnson, and nine others.

Wounded.—Q. McWilliams, J. McCartny, compound fracture of leg and thigh; Samuel McCartney, Mrs. Beck and child, J. Warner, ribs broken and leg broken; Elizabeth Kelshaw, Ann Kelshaw, J. L. Kelshaw, Mrs. Boyd, Mr. Thomas, Mrs. Smith and child, Walter Fergison, Horace Sawyer, Mrs. McWilliams, Dr. Yoko, Joshua Skeets, George Charles, Jacob Smith, arm broken, head fractured; Mrs. Sherwood, compound fracture of thigh; W. E. Thompson, Mrs. Handy and two children, L. Rapelyea and mother, Mr. Hughs, George McCartney, Mr. Salisbury, fractured head; Mr. Clark, Jacob Brazleton, Mrs. Brazleton, Mr. Hurd and son, Thomas McWilliams.

The Chicago Press describes the town and the catastrophe which befell it:

Ellison is a village in a township of that name, lying due south of the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, the nearest station of which, Young America, is five miles distant. Monmouth, the county seat of Warren County, is twelve miles to the northeast, and Galesburg, Knox County, is twenty-five miles nearly northeast, and the Mississippi is about sixteen miles west.

The village was a farming community and one of the older settlements of that section. The larger share of the structures, some sixty or seventy in number, that constituted the village, were ranged on a single straight street, running in a direction almost east and west, being the main county road running to the Mississippi and Burlington.

The surface is level prairie thence extending to Monmouth, a dead level, and on a clear day the Ellison timber can be seen skirting the horizon from Monmouth.

In this belt of timber the first traces of the tornado appear. Saturday and Sunday seem to have preserved very nearly the same characteristics in the vicinity of the ill-fated village as in this region. Sunday was showery throughout the day. As the afternoon waned the sky to the southwest had a most threatening appearance. A heavy bank of clouds of inky blackness seemed to rest upon the very surface of the prairie. In the language of John McWilliams, who is a relative of several of the victims, "they seemed to sweep the very prairie." Mr. McWilliams noted the approach of the storm from his farm-house, about a mile north of the street.

He saw two threateningly black clouds meet apparently about a mile west of the village, with the wildest commotion, and move on towards the village. The utmost alarm filled the minds of his own family, and of those in adjacent farm-houses, but how much less than the abject terror of the villagers who saw, but not in season to avoid.

The track of the tempest must tell the rest. The tornado struck the village about 5½ o'clock, and during its continuance no rain fell. The houses were frame structures. There was a large tavern stand and three stores, those of Samuel Johnson, Joseph Knowles and another. The appearance of the dwellings and structures after the passage of the whirlwind, is described by one eye-witness "as if one should tear to pieces and scatter a lumber yard." Of roofs and walls, and the various structures, there was seen in many instances scarcely a trace, as if a giant's hand had reduced and torn them to shreds and splinters. They lay scattered over the fields; here a piece of broken furniture and there a shattered door, and beyond an undistinguishable mass of timbers and boards, floor beams, ceiling and rafters. Even the bodies of some of the sufferers were torn to pieces.

An iron safe, weighing nine hundred pounds, was taken from Johnson's store and carried thirty feet. Horses, cattle and hogs were taken up by the wind, carried in the air and dashed to the earth, killed by the fall.

The track of the whirlwind seems not to have been very wide, nor was its course a long one. Scattered farm-houses about the village in various directions still stand, and though the wind was high, were uninjured; but of the village proper only three small cabins or shanties, which were to the southward of the line of desolating destruction, were spared, and they alone remain of the ill-fated village of Ellison.

Among the dead are a Mr. John Hand, his son, about ten years of age, and a babe, the latter of whom is supposed to have been drowned. The whole family appear to have been whirled with the fragments of their dwelling quite up into the air and deposited a considerable distance from where the house stood near a slough. Mr. Hand was carried about fifteen rods, and in his terrible flight received a frightful wound in his side from a timber. He survived until the next morning.

Another family named McWilliams suffered terribly. Miss Mary Ann McWilliams, about 22; her sister Harriet, aged about 16, and her brother Thomas, about 14, are among the dead, and the poor old mother, eighty years of age—the only remaining member of the family, except some older children who were living at a distance—was very badly injured.

W. E. Thompson, his wife and child, Mrs. Brazleton and her two children, a son and daughter, Martin Wentworth, Levina Lacey, Hiram Johnson and child, and two other persons whose names were unknown to the informant, make up the list of the fourteen instantly killed, comprised in a special dispatch to us from Monmouth last evening. These embrace all the names of the dead which we have been able to obtain.

As near as can be ascertained in the confusion which prevailed, about fifty persons were very seriously and many more slightly injured. Among the injured was Mr. Samuel Johnston, merchant, who has one leg and three ribs broken.

The Tariff on Wool—Letter from J. N. Reynolds, Esq.

New-York, Sunday, May, 30, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Sir: In your paper of the 28th, I find this expression:

"One thing is quite sure, a very different sort of argument was used after he (Wolcott) went to Washington, from that which Mr. Stone had employed, and with very different results. Two prominent and influential politicians were brought upon the scene for the sake of the influence they could exert, each within the ranks of his own particular party. Mr. J. N. Reynolds, a magnate among the Americans, and President of the Councils, received $1,500 for his services."

I am sure you can have no desire to do me so gross a wrong as the above, and I therefore send you the means for correction.

Yours truly, J. N. REYNOLDS.

The following is the material portion of the letter referred to above:

"* * Exactly $1,500 of Mr. Stone's money was spent under my exclusive direction, but not a dollar of it in compensation to myself! nor so much as a cocktail or plate of oysters to a member of Congress! While, if I had had a few hundred dollars more at my disposal, I could have made a good use of it, as I certainly should have insisted on sending an intelligent agent into at least one more wool-growing district in Ohio.

Of the transactions of the Boston house, which occurred at a subsequent session, I am wholly ignorant. I never saw or spoke to one of the Wolcott partners, nor do I believe that the measure was bought through Congress, and that if the truth be elicited, it will be found that the amount stated, if expended at all, was exacted, paid and received, under pretended arrangements which never existed, and had in fact no influence in passing the measure—in a word, a fraud!

I was neither agent, counsel, nor lobby member. It suited my purpose to coöperate with Mr. Stone during the political campaign in which I was then actively engaged. The resolutions which I prepared and passed through the American organization preceded and did not follow my coöperation with Mr. Stone. The whole disgraceful exhibition of the Wolcott fraud took place at a subsequent session of Congress, the knowledge of which, in common with the community at large, I first learned through the public press.

The New-York Times Building.

Correspondence of the Troy Whig.

New-York is the paradise of newspapers. Everybody has his pet paper, and it forms a prominent part of his morning or evening meal. Breakfast is incomplete at a New-York hotel without a morning journal; and one might as well be out of the world as not read the papers—no wonder they pay.

The latest evidence of newspaper prosperity is the large and magnificent structure erected on the site of the 'Brick Church,' by the proprietors of the New-York Times, and used by them for the publication of their paper. In its capacious apartments, brain-power, hand-power, and steam-power are at work, and the machinery necessary to carry on a daily journal of extended circulation may be seen there to the best advantage.

The Times Building is a colossal structure. The stone from which it is built was brought from New-Brunswick. It is a beautiful olive color, singularly pleasing to the eye and harmonizing admirably with the architectural design of the edifice. In addition to its principal inhabitant a large number of commodious stores and offices are occupied by men of multifarious pursuits. The editorial, composing and business departments of the building are well arranged for these various purposes, but the greatest curiosity is the monster far down below the surface of terrestrial things, that is constantly swallowing countless sheets of white, meaningless paper, and disgorging them, charged with a day's history of the busy work above. An underground railroad, in the shape of a flight of iron steps, takes the visitor down to the regions that this leviathan inhabits. The vaults extend some distance under the street, and are well-lighted and ventilated. The press is one of Hoe's "ten-cylinder," and is capable, when in first rate running order, of striking off 20,000 copies of the paper per hour. The Times Building, complete in every department, and the only one in New-York built specially for newspaper purposes, is a monument to successful enterprise.

Annual Meeting of the N. J. R. R. & T. Co.

The NewJersey Railroad and Transportation Company held their annual meeting yesterday in the new dépôt in Jersey-City. The structure is an excellent one—spacious, convenient and well-devised. Its whole length, including as well the wooden portion which rests on piles, as the brick-work which stands on solid earth, is 500 feet by 103 wide; the height of the roof is 43 feet, exclusive of a cupola which runs the entire length, and serves to light up the whole building, and to ventilate the interior. The roof is formed of one entire arch, without any central support, and is made of corrugated galvanized iron, which forms a finish, without painting, both on the inside and on the outside. The front of the dépôt on Hudson-street is 125 feet in width and two stories high, with handsome towers at the corners. The second story is devoted to offices for the superintendent, freight agent, conductor, and other officers and agents of the Company, and has a splendid iron balcony, or gallery, extending across and lengthwise at each side and each end of the building. The cars will run into the building on five different tracks and the boat will come a sufficient distance under the water front to shelter the passengers in going from one to the other.

On each side of the dépôt are two slips, making four in all; these have handsome and commodious ferry houses for the accommodation of ferry passengers, and they are so connected with the dépôt, that, in case the "car boat" should not be in the slip, railroad passengers can take either boat, without being exposed to the weather.

On the track on the northern side of the dépôt was a line of engines and cars, neatly fitted up and decked with flags and streamers. The engines were four in number, commencing with the Elizabeth, the first used on the road, and which made its introductory trip in June, 1837. It has now arrived at years of discretion, being just 21. It is obvious, however, that the Elizabeth must have lived too fast. It has grown out of modern recognition. It is but a ghost of the past. With the mournfully-dilapidated old car attached, it seems like some gigantic skeleton disinterred after the lapse of countless ages, and bears about as much resemblance to the modern creation as the icthyosaurus does, or did, to the horse. After the Elizabeth came the Woodruff, made in 1837, and which in the interval between July, 1856, and May, 1858, has run 45,126 miles. Then followed the J. P. Jackson, which made its first trip in July, 1851, and since January, 1855, has run 96,844 miles. Then came the A. O. Zabriskie—the youngest of all—which has been in use since January last, and up to June, ran 12,062 miles.

The cars were lighted with gas, and exhibited some of the most recent improvements.

The annual Report, which was submitted by Mr. Jackson, the Vice-President, presents the following facts, among others:

"Nearly three millions of passengers have been added to the twenty-five millions previously transported on the road, without the loss of a single life or the fracture of a single limb"

The results of the last fiscal year are gratifying—the gross receipts being $911,617 25, and $910,637 66 the year before. The expenses for the last year are $376,866 05, being a ratio to the earnings of forty-one and one-third per cent., and for that preceding, $400,715 80, and the ratio forty-four per cent. The surplus carried to profit and loss Jan. 1, 1858, after payment of two semi-annual dividends 5 per cent. each, is $107,171 18, while for the previous year it was $85,257 84. The amount of the surplus fund after applying $25,644 13 for relaying a portion of the road last year with new rails, is $271,083 11.

The whole number of passengers, not including commuters, carried last year, is 2,238,130; and of tons of merchandise, 80,872½, against 2,278,913½ passengers, and 68,688 tons the year before. The number of miles run by the trains last year was 396,032, and the ratio of running expenses 92 6.10 cents a mile, against 407,632 miles, and a ratio of running expenses at the rate of 98½ cents a mile for the year preceding.

The tax and transit duties paid the State of New-Jersey, for 1857, amount to $34,225 04; the previous year they amounted to $33,558 88. Dividends at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, amounting to $1,745, have, as usual, been paid to the School Fund, on the stock of this Company, given in payment of the State's Newark Turnpike Stock.

The returns of the Treasurer for the first four months of 1858 exhibit the receipts to be $215 500 01, while for the like period of 1857, they were $238,525 41. The reduction of expenses during the same time in 1858, compared with 1857, is $14,500, making the diminution of net earnings only $8,435 40, which will not affect the usual dividends of the Company, and but inconsiderably reduce the annual surplus. In consequence of the general stagnation of business the Board have instituted a closer economy in the working operations.

By comparing the financial results and operations of our work for 1852 with 1855, 1856 and 1857, the increase for a space of six years is shown, and the uniformity of the receipts and expenses, and a revenue corresponding with the activity of business, is established.

A resolution, providing that in future the annual report shall be printed and distributed at least fifteen days in advance of the annual meeting, was adopted, after discussion.

The meeting then adjourned.

At 2 o'clock a monster collation was served, at which about 650 guests were assembled. Gov. Pennington presided at one end of the principal table, and Gen. Darcy at the other. The enjoyment was general, and nobody complained of anything—Downing, the caterer, having obviously exerted himself to the utmost.

State Loans.

From the Albany Atlas and Argus, June 5.

There are three distinct State Loans now advertised for, and for which proposals will be received to the 24th inst., as follows:

1. The Comptroller advertises for a loan of $100,000 at 5 per cent., reimbursable July 1, 1875, to make good the deficiency in the annual contribution from the Canal Revenues of $350,000 to the General Fund Debt Sinking Fund, required by section 2 of article 7 of the Constitution. The Canal Revenues, after paying the prior lien to the Canal Debt Sinking Fund, have proved insufficient, by this amount, to meet the annual contribution to the Sinking Fund, for paying the General Fund Debt. The Comptroller is authorized to make a loan in such a case as this, by chapter 216 of the laws of 1848.

2. For the purpose of proceeding with the work on the Erie Canal enlargement at the Montezuma Marshes and at Holley, the only places where there is much work that can be done during Canal navigation, and of finishing some important work on the Oswego Canal, at the Gascon Rapids, the Commissioners of the Canal Fund have availed themselves of the law 1857, which authorizes a loan under the 10th section of the 7th article of the Constitution, and have advertised for a 5 per cent. loan of $200,000, repayable in 1860, to be applied to the above work. The above section of the Constitution allows a debt, not exceeding one million of dollars in the aggregate, "to meet casual deficits or failures in revenues, or for expenses not provided for."

3. The 5 per cent. loan of $1,510,000, reimbursable in 1868, advertised for by the Commissioners of the Canal Fund, is for the purpose of extending that amount of the Canal debt falling due on the 1st day of July, and which the Canal Debt Sinking Fund is insufficient to meet by that time. This Sinking Fund will prove abundantly sufficient to provide for the ultimate payment of the Canal Debt, as it is the first lien on the Canal Revenues, but it will not meet the debt as fast as it matures, and hence this extension. The Commissioners of the Canal Fund are authorized to make a new loan in such a case as this, by section 3 of chapter 335, of the laws of 1855.

The whole loan for which proposals are to be received up to the 24th inst., it will have been seen, is $1,800,000. But only $300,000 of it is a new loan.

Another Wisconsin Railroad Swindle.

From the Madison (Wis.) State Journal, May 29.

The Milwaukee and Superior Railroad Company was incorporated by an act of the Legislature, in March, 1856. In the following April it was organized, and C. R. Alton, H. Haertel, Edward Button, D. P. Hull and Joshua Stark, of the city of Milwaukee; Julius White, of Madison, and George Reed, of Manitowoc, were chosen Directors. This Board of Directors then elected C. R. Alton President; H. T. Haertel, Vice-President; H. K. White, Nominal Secretary; H. W. Janes, Acting-Secretary; D. P. Hull, Treasurer; and Joshua Stark, Attorney.

The fourth section of the act of incorporation provides that whenever $100,000 shall have been subscribed to the capital stock of the Company, and five per centum thereon paid in, after due notice in the newspapers, the stockholders may meet and organize. It appears by the testimony of Mr. Alton, the President, that this provision, so far as the "paying in" is concerned, was totally disregarded, and has been disregarded.

The testimony shows that sometime after the pretended organization, the company issued $100,000 in full paid stock to C. R. Alton, ostensibly for services in some matter connected with the Green Bay and Milwaukee Railroad. This amount Alton divided up and transferred as follows: To Herman Haertel, $15,000; to E. Button, $15,000; to D. P. Hull, $15,000; to Joshua Stark, $7,500; and to himself, $42,500. Mr. Alton, in his testimony, admits that the Company received no services for this $100,000 from either of these directors, or from himself, except as before mentioned, and that it was understood among them that it should be divided as already stated, previous to its issue!

It further appears that this enterprizing Company sent out agents among the honest and unsophisticated farmers of Milwaukee and Ozaukee Counties, and induced them to mortgage their farms for the benefit of these sharpers. Many of these farmers were Germans, and German agents were sent out to address them, and assist in duping them. The agents received from two to two and a half per cent. of the amount subscribed. Thus many poor farmers were induced to hazard their all for the aggrandizement of these heartless and unscrupulous Railroad swindlers. Two hundred and five thousand dollars of farm mortgage stock was raised in this manner. One hundred and twenty thousand dollars of stock, called "cash subscribers," were also issued; and mortgage bonds, so that, in stock and bonds, the Company had issued five hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars without having a single dollar paid in to the Company, as required by its charter! A large portion of these extraordinary issues were made, it seems, to obtain a loan of $100,000 of Milwaukee City bonds, which, together with the farm mortgage bonds, constituted all the real capital of this moonshine Company.

One Henry Kean was killed in a prison-cell a few nights ago by his companion, whose weapon was a piece of pine plank, wrenched from the cell-bunk

The Central Railroad Company of this State have begun the work of Bridge inspection along their entire route.

The Great Western mail for the East now reaches Boston (via Albany) two hours earlier.

THE MITCHELL CONTEMPT CASE.

On Saturday the case of McCunn and Moncrief vs. McKechnie was resumed, before Judge Brady, pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Mitchell, the lawyer for the defendants, who was committed for contempt, appeared in Court, the term of his incarceration having expired, and took part, as usual, in the conduct of the case. An order to place the papers in dispute on file was agreed to, on Saturday week, the quid pro quo being an adjournment until Saturday last; no further difficulty occurred, therefore, and the case went on regularly. A number of witnesses were examined on the plaintiff's rebuttal, and at 1½ a postponement occurred till Tuesday (to-morrow) at 12 o'clock.

Before Judge Hilton.

Babcock vs. Raymond, Wesley and Jones.—A suit was brought in a Ward Court, by the plaintiff against the proprietors of the New-York Times to recover a compensation for letters to that journal detailing a vote taken by certain passengers as to their preference for presidential candidates, in the late contest. The judge of the Ward Court dismissed the complaint, on the ground that the letters were not valuable, and were not used by the Times; but Judge Hilton, on Saturday, reversed the decision.

Spirit of the Trade Circulars.

WM. G. CUTTING'S FLOUR AND GRAIN CIRCULAR.

New-York, Saturday, June 5, 1858.

The Flour market during the week has ruled quite steady, with a fair demand for home consumption, and a moderate inquiry for export. The receipts have been pretty large, yet holders have exhibited no very pressing desire to realize. Superfine and Extra State have been more sought after than other kinds, and have consequently advanced a trifle. In Canada Flour there is a moderate business doing, and but little change in prices. In Southern Flour there is a fair business doing, without change in prices. The variations in all varieties, during the week, is but slight. Rye Flour is unchanged in price, and sales continue small. Corn Meal is in moderate demand, with prices unchanged.

Grain—The Wheat market has ruled firm throughout the week, and on Thursday, freights having declined 1d.@2d. ℔ bushel, prices advanced 2c.@3c., the market closing buoyant at 83c.@87c. for Chicago Spring; 90c.@92c. for Milwaukee Club; 99c.@$1 05 for Western Red Winter; $1@$1 12 for White; 85c.@90c. for Canada Club; $1@$1 10 for Canada White. There are some parcels very inferior Spring Wheat in market that will not bring over, say 80c.@81c. for Chicago, and 85c.@88c. for Milwaukee. Rye has only been in moderate demand, and the market closes steady at 65c.@67c., the latter price for choice parcels. Barley is dull, with very little offering, and a very moderate demand, at 52c.@60c. Corn has continued firm during the entire week, and the decline which took place the latter part of last week has been fully recovered; Western Mixed closing at 60c.@73c. for inferior to good; Southern White 72c.@78c.; Yellow do. 78c.@80c. for good to prime. Some parcels of inferior distilling mixed have been sold as low as 57c.@58c. Oats are scarce and have materially advanced, closing at 40c.@45c. for State and Western, and 37c.@40c. for Jersey.

Freights—Are decidedly lower. The closing rates to Liverpool are for Grain 6½d.@7d. in bulk and 7d. in ship's bags; Flour 1s. 10½d.@2s.

Hops.

From the Cooperstown Freeman's Journal.

Prices of Hops have receded a little from former low figures, in New-York, and are now quoted at 4c.@6c. for prime qualities—a rate at which it would be difficult to purchase at Otsego. These low rates do not begin to pay—have already driven many out of the business of hop-growing—and will induce others to quit it. A hop-grower writing from Vermont, recently, says: "In this county, not over one-third as many acres are this year devoted to hops as there were last year." It is so in many portions of New-England. In the Counties of Montgomery and Schoharie, in this State, a great many hop-yards have been plowed up the past year. In Madison, Otsego, Oneida and Herkimer many growers have plowed up their yards, or reduced the extent of land formerly devoted to hops. They do not intend to make the success of the crop their sole dependence.

Imports of Vegetables from Bermuda.—The Hamilton Bermudian, May 19, reports the shipments of vegetables of this year's growth, from Bermuda, to date, at 18,973 bbls. Potatoes, including 14,298 bbls. to New-York, and 258,320 lbs. Onions, including 21,320 lbs. to New-York.

MORE TO BE ADMIRED THAN THE RICHEST DIADEM
EVER
WORN BY KINGS OR EMPERORS.

WHAT? WHY A BEAUTIFUL HEAD OF HAIR.

Because it is the ornament God Himself provided for all our race. Reader, although the rose may bloom ever so brightly in the glowing cheek, the eye be ever so sparkling, the teeth be those of pearls, if the head is bereft of its covering, or the hair be snarled and shriveled, harsh and dry, or worse still, if sprinkled with gray, nature will lose more than half her charms. Prof. Wood's Hair Restorative, if used two or three times a week, will restore and permanently secure to all such an ornament. Read the following and judge The writer of the first is the celebrated Pianist, Thalberg:

Dr. Wood: New-York, April 19, 1858.

Dear Sir: Permit me to express to you the obligations I am under for the entire restoration of my hair to its original color; about the time of my arrival in the United States it was rapidly becoming gray, but upon the application of your "Hair Restorative" it soon recovered its original hue. I consider your Restorative as a very wonderful invention, quite efficacious as well as agreeable.

I am, dear sir, yours truly,
S. THALBERG.

"Drych a'r Gwyliedydd"
Welsh Newspaper office, No. 13 Nassau-st., April 12, 1858.

Prof. O. J. Wood—Dear Sir: Some month or six weeks ago I received a bottle of your Hair Restorative and gave it my wife, who concluded to try it on her hair, little thinking at the time that it would restore the gray hair to its original color, but to her as well as my surprise, after a few weeks' trial it has performed that wonderful effect by turning all the gray hairs to dark brown, at the same time beautifying and thickening the hair. I strongly recommend the above Restorative to all persons in want of such a change of their hair.

CHARLES CARDEW.
New-York, July 25, 1857.

Prof. O. J. Wood: With confidence do I recommend your Hair Restorative, as being the most efficacious article I ever saw. Since using your Hair Restorative my hair and whiskers, which were almost white, have gradually grown dark; and I now feel confident that a few more applications will restore them to their natural color. It also has relieved me of all dandruff and unpleasant itching, so common among persons who perspire freely.

J. G. KILBY.
Chicago, Ill., May 1, 1857.

Prof. Wood: About two years ago my hair commenced falling off and turning gray; I was fast becoming bald, and had tried many remedies to no effect. I commenced using your Restorative in January last. A few applications fastened my hair firmly. It began to fill up, grow out, and turned back to its former color, (black.) At this time it is fully restored to its original color, health and appearance, and I cheerfully recommend its use to all.

J. D. HOES.

The Restorative is put up in bottles of three sizes, viz.: large, medium and small; the small holds half a pint, and retails for $1 per bottle; the medium holds at least 20 per cent. more in proportion than the small, retails for $2 per bottle; the large holds a quart, 40 per cent. more in proportion, and retails for $3.

MANTLES, BURNOUS, &c.

The successive aggrandizement of the establishment of LA COMPAGNIE LYONNAISE have rendered it one of the most extensive in Europe. The warerooms at the present day comprise upwards of thirty saloons, or galleries, having four separate entrances. Being their own manufacturers, their productions are not liable to the extra charges made on account of intermediate agents, and thus this company can afford to offer to the public on terms far more advantageous than any other house. Every article, even the CACHEMIRES, is marked in plain figures.

LA COMPAGNIE LYONNAISE have established houses at Lyons, for the manufacture of SILK STUFFS; at Alencon and Chantilly, for the LACE manufactory;
And at Kaschmyr, for CACHEMIRE SHAWLS,
but they have no succursale for sale in any country whatever.

RIBBONS, LADIES! RIBBONS!
"And so, you really matched that beautiful ribbon at LICHTENSTEIN'S?"
"Yes; he had exactly the pattern. He matches any ribbon, however rare and bizarre, you can produce in America. More than that, he does it at 25 per cent. less than the regular prices!"

The fact is, when LICHTENSTEIN saw all our great ribbon dealers going to the wall during the hard times, a bright idea struck him. He rushed over at once to the European manufacturers. They wanted money. He had the ready cash. In their necessity they consented to supply him on his own terms. He ransacked, therefore, all the magasins of France, England and Germany, for recherché ribbons. In this way he collected a stock and an assortment unparalleled for perfection, and at the same time susceptible of being sold on the most extraordinarily cheap terms. Hence it is that ribbons of fine quality are so exceedingly scarce. LICHTENSTEIN monopolizes them nearly all at his Temple of Taste, No 287 Broadway. You can secure there what you cannot possibly find elsewhere in america. We advise our female friends to fill their orders at once at LICHTENSTEIN'S in regard to ribbons for mantillas, dress trimmings, bonnets &c. The demand is great. The stock is diminishing Go, while the assortment is large. Never wait until you have to put up with other's leavings.

The perils attendant upon wearing the rigid Steel Hoop Skirt (by not permitting the garments to be compressed) in case of accidents by fire, as well as the many difficulties, inconveniences, and too often inelegant displacement of dress, is entirely obviated by the use of Woodward's Patent Columbian Skirts and Extenders. Ladies wearing them may with confidence enter the most crowded assembly, church, carriage, railroad car or omnibus, without mortification to themselves or inconvenience to others; they may be compressed into the smallest space without breaking or injuring the expansive powers of the spring, while they afford an easy and graceful fall to the drapery in a sitting position, and, upon rising, immediately resume their wonted shape and beauty, being every way pliable, very compressible, expansive and durable; they are peculiarly adapted for little misses' skirts, and, without exception, they form the most reliable and desirable promenade and traveling skirt in the world. This Monthly embraces within its scope:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The trouble in New-Orleans is not yet over, and it is to be feared that a great deal of blood is to be shed before quiet can be restored. Inflammatory placards against the Vigilance Committee were issued on Saturday evening, purporting to come from the American party, though it is said that more than one-half of that party are enrolled as members of the Committee. Yesterday speeches were made to the mob by Colonel CHRISTY, one of the Mayoralty candidates, and by Colonel HENRY, of Nicaraguan fame. Each of these gentlemen was anxious to distinguish himself by heading a charge against the Committee's forces. At noon yesterday, the date of our last dispatch, a desperate collision was deemed imminent. Meantime there has already been bloodshed, some two or three men being killed or wounded, among whom is J. P. WHITE, a prominent money broker, who is supposed to have furnished the cotton for the barricades of the Vigilants. He was shot and dangerously wounded, on Saturday night, in front of the City Hotel.

A dispatch, which we publish elsewhere, throws discredit on the report that Gov. CUMMING had been expelled from Salt Lake City by the Mormons. Letters from Camp Scott of the latest date mention no such event, and the report is regarded as improbable. At the same time, if a dispatch from Leavenworth to the St. Louis Democrat is to be relied upon, the hostile intentions of the Mormons cannot be doubted. It is stated that Capt. MARCY'S train from New-Mexico has been cut off by them, but no particulars are given. We place no reliance whatever in the statement, though given on the authority of a messenger from Fort Laramie.

Scarcely anything was done in Congress on Saturday besides pronouncing the customary eulogies upon the late Senator HENDERSON, of Texas. In the Senate that duty was, of course, performed by his surviving colleague, Gen. HOUSTON, who sketched in a feeling manner the leading incidents in the life of the deceased. Mr. BIGLER introduced a resolution, which lies over, still further to extend the session till the 21st inst. In the House, the Senate Bill for the admission of Oregon was referred to the Territorial Committee. Messsrs. BRYAN, of Texas, and QUITMAN, of Miss., eulogized Senator HENDERSON, and the House adjourned.

We have received advices from Hamilton, Bermuda, to the 26th ult. The Legislature was opened on the 20th by Governor MURRAY in person. In his address the Governor says that the Colony evinces signs of continued prosperity. The news of the late British outrages in the Gulf had reached Bermuda, and as the British Admiral was there, it is to be supposed that by this time the instructions sent out by the British Minister have reached him.

The brig Lillian, Captain NICHOLS, arrived at this port yesterday, from Black River, Jamaica. On the 23d of May, when only 10 miles from Sombrero Key, he was come up with and boarded by an offices from a British war-steamer, (probably the Styx,) who made the usual inquiries, examined the brig's papers, and told him he might proceed. The decks of the brig were piled with logwood, and there was no cause to suspect her of being a slaver.

The brig Abram, Capt. REVANS, from Savanilla, via Key West on the 25th ult., arrived at this port yesterday. She was boarded by the omnipresent Styx on the 26th, the day after leaving Key West. The case has already been referred to in dispatches received via Charleston.

The Spaniards are beginning to take their turn in overhauling American vessels. The bark Tornado, which arrived yesterday, reported that an officer from a Spanish man-of-war boarded him off Havana, and politely requested a view of his clearance, with which document the captain refreshed his eyesight, when he left.

The U. S. sloop-of-war Constellation, Captain C. H. BELL, arrived at this port on Saturday from Genoa, which place she left on the 17th of April. She has been absent since August 1855, during which she has visited all the ports of any consequence in the Mediterranean. She is already ordered to be fitted for a cruise in the Gulf, and will be dispatched within a few days. The sloop-of-war Saratoga, at Norfolk, is under orders to sail for the same destination. The sloop Macedonian sailed from Boston on Saturday, at 3½ o'clock P. M. She is also bound to the Gulf.

We have received from Mexico, and publish elsewhere, accounts of the bombardment and capture of Tobasco by the Zuloaga forces. This and Tampico are the only ports in possession of the Government. The houses in Tobasco are reported to have suffered very much from the bombardment—that of the American Consul, especially, was in a direct line between the fire of both parties. The war-steamer Guerrero had arrived at Tobasco, but too late to take part in the bombardment.

JAMES GRAHAM, one of the four firemen who were injured by the falling of a wall at the late fire in Monroe street, died Saturday morning, at the City Hospital. An inquest was held, and a verdict of accidental death rendered. The funeral exercises took place yesterday afternoon in front of the Hospital, conducted by Rev. Mr. MCALLISTER, a Methodist clergyman. The whole Fire Department, as is usual in the case of the death of a member while engaged in the discharge of his duties as a fireman, joined in the funeral procession which accompanied the remains to Union Cemetery in Williamsburgh, where the body was interred. It is about five years since the Fire Department was called to attend the funeral of a member under similar circumstances.

The Swill-Milk Committee of the Board of Health held another meeting on Saturday, when Drs. GARDNER and SHANKS were examined. Dr. SHANKS considered the odor of the stables agreeable, and the swill-milk wholesome. Dr. GARDNER took a directly opposite view of the subject. He considered the odor bad, the milk deleterious and the meat poisonous The City Inspector and others testified, and then the Committee adjourned to Tuesday next.

On Friday evening last, a sail-boat containing four men capsized in Gowanus Bay. The men clung to the boat and drifted for several hours, when three of the four became exhausted and were drowned. Their names were HENRY CEASER, JOHN BOGERT and FREDERICK M. SCOTT. The fourth man, named WILLIAM PAYNTON, was rescued by a ferry-boat, after floating seven miles, having been in the water five hours.

Yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, another sail-boat capsized in the East River, just off the Tenth-street Ferry slip, Greenpoint, and all of the occupants of the boat were drowned. Their names were JEREMIAH ELLIOTT, CHARLES BASSETT and JOHN ROSS—residents of the Seventeenth Ward.

There were 374 deaths in the City last week—68 less than occurred during the week preceding.

The General Markets, on Saturday, closed heavily for cotton, with sales of 1,900 bales, including Middling Upland at 11½c.@11¾c. ⅌ lb. Flour was in lively demand, and advanced 5c. ⅌ bbl. Wheat was less abundant and less active. A good inquiry prevailed for corn atfull rates. Pork and beef were quiet. Lard was in fair request. Sugars continued active and buoyant. Spirits turpentine and common resin were decidedly brisker, the latter at an proved prices. Freights were very heavy, with 710 vessels of all classes in port.

The Result of the Late Aggressions.

By an arrival from Hamilton, Bermuda, we learn that, on the 26th ult., the particulars of the recent aggressions on our commerce by British cruisers were known in the Island. As the Admiral, Sir HOUSTON STEWART, was there at that date, it is probable that he took measures at once for the suppression of outrages committed by persons under his immediate command. If the Admiral adopted this course, we shall hear of no more "visitations" in the Gulf. And if he has not issued positive orders on his own responsibility, he will have done so, by this time, on the responsibility of Lord NAPIER, whose dispatches left Halifax by steamer for Bermuda on Friday morning last. In either case, therefore, we do not expect that there will be any more attempts in the Gulf of Mexico, or in the ports of Cuba, to enforce the insulting right of search.

With regard to the offences of the past we must wait with becoming patience for the return news from Europe, due in the course of a week, and see with what temper and disposition the British Government and people are disposed to regard them, before we can make a new move. All that could be done by our Executive to preserve the honor of the American flag has been done. We have never supposed that any active interference by American men-of-war would be found necessary to arrest the overhauling of our merchantmen; but the presence of a powerful American squadron in the Gulf is an indication of the firm stand which the nation is prepared to take on this important question. It is not likely that the Government will recede from the position assumed by General CASS in his last dispatches to Mr. DALLAS. That position is—indemnity for the past, and security, the most complete, from any exercise of the right of search for all time to come. Any compromise or any agreement short of this would fail to satisfy the American people, and would leave our relations with Great Britain on too precarious a footing. One of the highest aims of the statesmen of both countries should be to remove all international misunderstandings, and not leave the issue of peace or war to a mere chance, or to the discretion of a naval commander. We do not hesitate to say, that if our Government tacitly or openly concede, ever so remotely, the right of search to British cruisers, the peace of the two countries, and probably of the world, would be a matter of the purest chance—liable to be broken at any moment and on the most absurd pretexts.

It is, therefore, as much to the interest of the British people as it is to our own, to have this question settled now and forever. After all that our Government has said on the subject, we do not suppose that they will recede, and we believe that a firm attitude on our part is all that is required to enable us to carry the point.

If the outrages in the Gulf of Mexico lead, as they ought to lead, to the final adjustment of this vexed question of the right of search, they will form an important event in history—not altogether to be regretted.

The Coup d'Etat in New-Orleans.

New-Orleans is, unquestionably, the most un-American city in our whole Confederacy. The French and Spanish population, though less than the Anglo Saxon in point of numbers, do, nevertheless, give the dominant tone to the morals of the people. They form, too, the permanent population of the city, for the emigrants from the Northern States are mostly absorbed by their business pursuits, and take but little interest in local politics. Foreigners, on arriving in New-Orleans, conform to the French rather than to the American habits of the people, and thus the original elements of society are preserved, and the traditions of the first settlers of the colony are kept up. It is the only city in the whole Union in which the pageants and mummeries of Mardi-gras are publicly exhibited, and in which the theatres are kept open on Sunday evenings. With all the changes that have taken place there within the past twenty-five years, it is still difficult for a stranger in New-Orleans to feel that he is in one of the cities of the American Union, the whole aspects of the place are so essentially foreign.

It is in New-Orleans, on this account, that we should naturally look for a coup d'etat, a revolution after the manner of Paris, Madrid and Mexico. The intelligence of the recent émeute, therefore, has not caused much surprise, but seems to be regarded as a rather natural occurrence than otherwise. As we have yet no other accounts of the revolt than those furnished by telegraphic reports, we are, to a certain degree, in the dark as to the motives of the so-called Vigilance Committee: but there is not much doubt that their sole object is to insure the success of the "independant ticket" in the municipal election, which takes place to-day. And, looking at the character of the resident population, and the inefficiency of the party which have held possession of the City for the past two years, there is not much reason to doubt the success of the movement. It will be a most disastrous success, however; for a political victory, gained by such means, will not be the last one, and we may look for a municipal revolution in the great commercial metropolis of the South as often as a new election comes round. The Vigilance Committee of San Francisco was not a political movement. It aimed at nothing but the preservation of public order, and having succeeded in ridding the community of certain obnoxious persons, it dissolved and left behind it no injurious evidence of its existence. Such, we fear, will not be the case with the New-Orleans Committee. There have been frequent mobs in some of our Northern cities—and even in that law-abiding capitol of New-England, where men do not even dare to smoke a cigar in the streets, as it would be contrary to the city ordinances, we have seen a fierce mob endeavor to prevent an officer of the law from doing his duty where his duty was repugnant to the moral pale of the community. But New-Orleans furnishes us with the first instance of an actual revolt against the constituted authorities for the purpose of insuring the success of a political party. There was a revolt of a very different character in New-Orleans at this same season of the year about twenty-five years ago, when the people took the law into their own hands and inflicted condign punishment upon one of the wealthy residents, a lady, whose cruelty to her slaves had excited the popular indignation. They completely riddled her sumptuous mansion, threw all the furniture into the streets, destroyed her carriage, set her wretched negroes free, and drove her from the city. But revolutions of this kind are rare in New-Orleans, as in all other cities of the South. She afterwards brought a suit against the municipal authorities for the damage done to her property, and we believe recovered the amount of her claims.

Our own municipal revolution occurred only last Summer, when Mayor WOOD defied the Legislature and the civil courts, but that was nothing more than a single fight of one man against the people, and as it was not attended with a particularly brilliant result, there is not much probability that the revolt of the Mayor against the people here will ever be imitated.

The War in Mexico.

After the Zuloaga Government, what next? is substantially the question which most people, interested in Mexico, are curious to hear answered. That Government, or rather dictatorship, still nominally exists, and we are looking for its overthrow by every mail; but it is impossible to indicate the Presidential successor of ZULOAGA, or to decide whether it is the destiny of the country to have one at all.

Since we last had occasion to comment on Mexican affairs, the actual Government have achieved two successes of some importance. One was at Tampico over DE LA GARZA, and the other was at Tobasco. The account of the bombardment and capture of the latter place will be found in to-day's impression. These two—Tampico and Tobasco—are the only ports in possession of the Zuloaga Government. As all the other ports of the country are in the hands of the Liberals, it follows that on goods imported through them to the Capitol, double duties are paid—first to the Liberals and secondly to the Government. Through Tampico and Tobasco—now that they are in possession of the Government—the bulk of foreign imports will pass to the interior, and the revenue which ZULOAGA will derive from these sources may enable him to prolong his dictatorial reign.

But with every liberal-minded man in Mexico opposed to his course, it is impossible that ZULOAGA can continue long in power. His opponents are stronger and better organized than ever were the opponents of SANTA ANNA or COMONFORT—and with this difference, that the former have right on their side and command the confidence of the country. Vera Cruz, the principal port on the Atlantic, may be considered as completely lost to the Government; for it is not believed that any force could be raised sufficiently strong to effect its reduction. Several months ago, ECHEAGARAY started with a formidable army, and with the avowed purpose of attacking Vera Cruz; but his progress was stopped long before he reached his destination, by the liberal forces under LA LLAVE. The last accounts that we have of the Government troops under ECHEAGARAY represent them as utterly disorganized, and dependant on charity for support. In the north, VIDAURRI has proved himself invincible, and though his late victory over MIRAMON has stimulated the Government to send OSOLLOS against him with a reinforcement of 1,500 men, the latter's chances of success are of the poorest kind. In the south, ZULOAGA has a powerful and determined enemy in ALVAREZ The Pinto chief is in an impregnable position among the mountains of Guerrero—the spot where first the flag of Mexican Independence was unfurled, and where the whole force of SANTA ANNA was successfully resisted. Like VIDAURRI at the north, ALVAREZ, always ready to support in arms the liberal cause, is surrounded by a population devoted to his person and his interests. His army are advancing northward, and, by degrees, are wresting from the Government the important points that, at the commencement of the war, fell into their hands.

It is not improbable that, in the event of ZULOAGA'S defeat, he will be succeeded by some one of the military chiefs now in arms against him. But the past history of Mexico forbids us to hope that the next President, whatever his politics may be in theory, will possess any more practical ability for the management of affairs than his predecessors have displayed. The Republic seems doomed to perpetual anarchy, and though any interference on our part, at present, might be premature, it is certain that we cannot always remain in the neutral attitude that we have hitherto assumed. An American Protectorate over Mexico is not the chimera that some people imagine it to be.

SATANIC THEOLOGY.—Yesterday being Sunday, the Herald waxed didactic. It gave its readers the benefit of its views of Church discipline and Christian morality, which, like its views on most subjects, are peculiar. The text from which the Herald discoursed was the trial by a Church of one of its members on a charge of adultery. The person tried was pronounced guilty, and expelled.

The Herald has nothing to say concerning the question whether the accused party was guilty or innocent, which it evidently regards as of no consequence whatever. But it is astonished, shocked, petrified, in fact, that a Christian Church should assume to try a member for adultery. "Can it be believed," it cries, "that a member should be expelled for an alleged sinful commerce with one Widow BROWN?" Manifestly, the Herald never heard of such a thing before. "No one of us is safe," it goes on to say, "if an enemy can accuse us of having commerce with a widow!" and charges that the "deacons" who conducted the investigation were prompted solely by a prurient desire "of putting indelicate questions." The Herald can conceive of no other motive. By way of improvement, it closes the discussion of its subject by a general attack upon Christian churches throughout the land for daring thus to inquire into "a man's private life," and in the full flush of its indignation, exclaims:

> "And now the deacons of our churches undertake to try the members of their congregations for fornication. These gentlemen are certainly trying our patience. They may some day find that they have gone too far. They may drive us to remember that religion costs us in the United States over two hundred million of dollars every year, independently of the cost of new churches, and that this enormous outlay yields positively not a cent of return—in this world at least. A like sum spent on bridges, railroads or steamers, would aid civilization as much as many of our clergymen are trying to keep it back. And it might be a gain to the country to have our clergy at work at some calling which would really produce something."

Doubtless after such a rebuke the churches will better know their duty than to expel members for any kind of misconduct in "private life," otherwise the Herald may be induced to fulfill its threats of withdrawing the two hundred millions annually paid for the support of the gospel, and devote the last cent of it to the construction of "bridges, railroads, or steamers."

The Pen and the Sword.

There could hardly be a better proof of the degradation into which the French public and French society have fallen, than is afforded by the proceedings consequent upon the recent duel between M. PENE, a contributor to the Figaro, and an officer of the army. Of the revolting barbarity with which the attack on the former was planned and carried out, the deliberation which marked the conspiracy to murder him, and the determination with which it was executed, we have already spoken. Since the occupation of the French capital by the allied armies in 1815, there have happily not been many instances of similar attempts to save assassination from its merited execration by calling it satisfaction. Every army in the world, however, contains bullies of greater or less degree, and wherever bullies are, they will now and then band together to hunt down and destroy their enemies. What strikes us with most surprise in the whole matter is, therefore, not so much the circumstances which characterize the duel itself, as the relations towards each other in which it exhibits public opinion and the opinion of the army, barrack ethics and the morality of the salons, the code of honor and the Code Napoleon.

The army, be it remembered, has come to occupy in France a place of more than ordinary importance towards the rest of the nation. Its position is entirely different from that of any of its European confrères. Under all the other despotisms the military force obeys the monarch, not because in its opinion he is most likely to serve its interest, or because either it or the people have placed him on the throne, but because the grace of God has consecrated him for the work of governing. The distance which separates the Czar or the Kaiser from the civilian or soldier is equally great. He alone is master—and all others, whether in blouse or uniform, are the servants of his will. In every other army, too, there survives the anti-revolutionary loyalty, which girded Kings round with a rampart of sentiment, and made devotion to the throne one of the saving virtues. In France not one particle of this has outlived the downfall of the old régime, and the terrible storms which followed it. The French soldier is faithful above all things else to his colors. The people and the crown find wars, and money to pay for them. LOUIS NAPOLEON, putting aside the fact that he is his uncle's nephew, stands in a peculiarly dependent relation to the soldiery. Not only has he no title to their obedience beyond that conferred by the accident of his position, but he is actually their creature. Since his first appearance on French soil he has done all that in him lay to demonstrate to them the utter insignificance of all other portions of the community. Peasantry, bourgeoisie, aristocracy, literary men, have all in their turn been snubbed with terrible energy. The civil authorities have been degraded, and military men placed in their chairs. The civil divisions of the Empire even have but all but served to make way for the military districts, and the exigencies of military discipline.

Nothing, in short, has been left undone to prove to the army that the two great bodies of the nation are the Emperor and the Army—that their interests are one, and their power co-equal. It is impossible, once the subject has been thus narrowed down, that the latter should be able to forget that their Emperor is their creature—that their bayonets gave him his throne, and their bayonets still keep him on it—and the more vividly they remember it, the more disposed will he be to grant and they to exact. The position of a nation prostrate at the feet of two such masters may be readily imagined, and it is just to this position that the France of 1830 has come. A large body of men, sprung in the main from the lowest grades of society, and all but completely excluded from the humanizing influences of general society, rendered arrogant by the knowledge that they carry the fate of France in their scabbards, naturally expose themselves frequently to the comments of the Press, and more particularly to that portion of it which deals in satire. A sally directed against boorish lieutenants of cavalry is considered offensive—a council is held, the writer is sentenced to death, and a whole regiment agree to fight him till he is killed. A shout of public execration is called forth by the arrangement, and is met by the broad and unmistakable declaration, that the bourgeoisie and literary men may say what they please of each other, but that military men are exempt from criticism, or censure, not in matters of opinion only but in matters of taste, and that they will seek protection not in the Courts, or from the public, but from the sabres of the regiment. An appeal to the Emperor is met by a reference to the Minister of Justice, who, of course, can only refer to the military authorities, and the military authorities are brothers-in-arms of the offenders.

Even in Austrian Italy, Austrian officers have never declined to accord to an Italian the poor satisfaction of seeking atonement for an insult in a duel. When every other right has been torn from the conquered race, the traditional prerogative of a gentleman has at least been left to shield the unfortunates from personal ignominy; but the French Army seems disposed to deal out to its own countrymen scantier courtesy than their neighbors accord to foreigners. It has decided upon abrogating the "code of honor" in its own favor, for the duel is at an end when a civilian knows that a challenge from a military man means forty conflicts. The law has gagged the Press and the Parliament, but it has defined the offences which it will punish. The army proposes to create a new class of offences against its own dignity, constitutes itself the judge of the offender's guilt, inflicts death as the penalty with its own hands, and there is not in all France, the France of MIRABEAU and of GUIZOT, a single voice which dare stigmatize this monstrous insult to the nation, and outrage on its liberty.

A STATE LOAN OF $1,800,000.—An article which we copy from the Albany Atlas and Argus of Saturday, furnishes the particulars of three loans advertised by the Comptroller, for which proposals will be received up to the 24th inst., amounting in the aggregate to $1,800,000, though one million of it is not new.

The interest allowed is five per cent. In the present flush state of the money market, handsome premiums will no doubt be realized. Such loans are not only a favorite form of investment in themselves, but the stock issued is in request for banking purposes.

While the State is thus borrowing in behalf of the canals, it is satisfactory to witness a material increase of tolls,—the amount collected up to the 1st of June this year exceeding that received in the corresponding period of 1857 by $187,019.

Canal business has not only opened well, but there are grounds for believing that it will continue good through the season. All our advices from the Western States concur in showing an unprecedented quantity of produce in that region, which, owing to the crisis last Fall, has been wintered over. Prices, it is true, are very low, and so far, unfavorable to its coming forward. But, on the other hand, there is an urgent reason for its being sent to market in the necessities of holders, who are compelled to realize, while they see no near prospect of an advance. Consequently, we may expect to see the Canal fully employed till November, in bringing forward the fruits of last year's harvest and of the harvest now approaching. Fortunately for the West, although its productions are low in price, they are most abundant in quantity.

Congressional Obsequies.

Though it is decorous that Congress should pay proper respect to the dead, we see no good reason why a day of the session should be lost whenever the demise of a member is announced. The custom which makes an adjournment obligatory on every such occasion might advantageously be abolished. It is sometimes exceedingly inconvenient, nay, even detrimental to the public business, that a day should be lost. So it was on Saturday last. The session was near its close, and had just been reluctantly extended, the House only consenting to remain three days longer, when the death of Senator HENDERSON occurred, and one of the few remaining days was stricken out of the list. In this case we cannot doubt the adjournment would gladly have been dispensed with could that course be taken without an invidious appearance of disrespect. The usage was established, and, therefore, complied with.

In the earlier portion of sessions a day can better be spared. Yet, it may well be questioned whether the theory of respect implied in an adjournment is anything more than a hollow form. The public announcement on the floor and tributes from associates are impressive, but what shall be said of the holiday into which the adjournment practically resolves itself? Do honorable gentlemen retire from the halls of the Capitol too much oppressed for ordinary labor by the solemn consideration of death, and seek the retirement of their rooms to pass the hours in sorrow and meditation? It is, perhaps, not necessary to answer this question. Any one familiar with Congressional habits can judge for themselves how much more the memory of the dead is honored by the adjournment than it would have been by the ordinary avocations of the two Houses while in session.

We trust that some proper occasion may be taken to terminate this practice of funeral adjournments. It is but an empty form at best, and interferes materially with the public duties of Congress.

NEW USURY LAW IN PENNSYLVANIA.—An act making important changes in the law of interest has recently been passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature. It was signed by the Governor on the 28th ult.

This law makes six per cent. the legal rate in all cases where no lower rate is agreed upon. But when a rate higher than six per cent. is contracted to be paid it provides that the excess of interest shall not be collectable. Whenever a borrower or debtor shall have paid such excess, he may commence an action for the recovery of the same at any time within six months from the time of such payment, but not afterwards.

This law is much more just and sensible than ours, which makes the slightest taint of usury avoid the entire contract, causing the creditor wholly to lose both interest and principle.

Amusements.

ITALIAN OPERA.—The performance of the Barber on Saturday was very enjoyable; more particularly because it reintroduced two favorites, Miss ADA PHILLIPS and Sig. GASSIER; the lady making her first appearance of the season in the rôle of Rosina, and GASSIER exerting him facetiously and vigorously as Figaro, a part in which he is excellent. Miss PHILLIPS' natural talent has evidently not been buried in a napkin during her absence; her voice and style exhibit evidences of marked improvement. Sig. GASPARONI was not a superb Bartolo. The especial meed of honor was bestowed, by unanimous consent, upon Mme. GAZZANIGA, who took no part in the Opera, but appeared at the close of the first act to sing a dashing Spanish air, La Naranjera (the Orange Girl.) The reckless gayety of manner, archness of execution, and delicacy of vocalism, with which she contrived to throw a superior charm over some simple words, drove the audience into a spasm of delight. The song was encored, and GAZZANIGA made a decided hit with a surprisingly small expenditure of labor. It is currently reported that the fruity contents of the little basket she carried so jauntily, were afterwards "snapped up" at any price. No oranges were ever so favored.

This evening we are to have a revival of "Trovatore." The announcement of the fact was sufficient to insure a full house. Mme. GAZZANIGA and Miss PHILLIPS are in the cast, the former as Leonora.

Mr. ULLMAN left suddenly for Europe on Saturday, at a moment's notice, in an over-crowded steamer, and under circumstances which indicate some extraordinary inducements. It is hinted that he is to proceed post-haste to London, to effect a speedy engagement with certain leading stars. Mr. BARNUM is also to leave for Europe in a day or two, probably to give attention to his enterprise. In the meantime, the opera at the Academy gets on famously, without a manager.

MATILDA HERON.—Laura Keene's Theatre, under the management of Mr. SOTHERN, opens its doors this evening to MATILDA HERON, whose reappearance on the New-York boards will revive the ardor of the lady's numerous admirers. Miss HERON will appear as Mathilde, in her own adaptation of SUE'S work of that name. Mr. SOTHERN takes the part of Durivage. It is quite needless to observe that Miss HERON will find an excellent audience to welcome her return.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The success of the new Mormon burlesques renders it impossible to withdraw it from the bills; so it will run this week. Mr. BLAKE is still Brigham Young, and Mr. LESTER a very sweet tenor; the other attractions, like these, remain unchanged. The play this evening will be preceded by the farce of "The Lottery Ticket."

BURTON'S.—The benefit of Mlle. LAMOUREUX, of the Ronzani Ballet Troupe, is announced at this establishment for this evening. Mr. BURTON will appear in "Turning the Tables" as Jack Humphries.

NIBLO'S.—The RAVEL'S offer a good programme; "Pongo," "M. Duchalumeau," and tight-rope evolutions.

THE BOONE CHILDREN.—By the kind hospitality of Dr. S. P. TOWNSEND, the elegant residence of that gentleman, on Fifth-avenue, was Wednesday evening thrown open for a parlor entertainment by the BOONE children—their farewell appearance prior to their departure for Europe. Selections were presented from "Macbeth," the "Honey-Moon," and the "School for Scandal." A recitation of "The Leper," by LORA GORDON, was admirably delivered, in obedience to a special request. These children possess talents of a high order, and merit a cordial welcome wherever they go. It is understood to be the intention of their parents to give them the advantages of study abroad, in order to perfect their histrionic education.

BOWERY.—A new four-act drama, "The Scalp-Hunters; or, the Trappers of the Mountains," is announced for this evening; to be followed by "Harvey Birch" and the "Fire-Raiser."

NATIONAL.—Three pieces to-night: the "Roman Traitor," the "Red Gnome," and Dumb Sailor Boy."

BARNUM'S AMERICAN MUSEUM.—Mrs. KATE DENIN RYAN has been engaged, and will appear this evening in "Two Loves and a Life."

ETHIOPIAN MINSTRELSY.—WOOD'S Minstrels produce another novelty to-night, a Panorama of the Hudson, from Newburg to New-York, with musical accompaniments. BRYANT'S Minstrels give this evening, for the first time, "Darkey Assurance."

CONCERT.—A complimentary concert to Miss E. M. HALL will be given at the Brooklyn Athenæum to-morrow evening, Messrs. APTOMMAS, CONNER and others assisting.

The Monroe-Street Fire—Death of one of the Injured Firemen—Coroner's Inquest—Funeral Procession of the Fire Department.

JAMES GRAHAM, one of the four firemen injured by the falling of a wall at the fire in Monroe-street, last Friday morning, died at 5 o'clock Saturday morning, at the City Hospital. Coroner HILLS being notified of his death, proceeded to the Hospital Saturday forenoon, to hold an inquest, but, after impaneling a jury, was obliged to postpone the examination on account of the absence of necessary witnesses. At 10 A. M. yesterday he held the inquest. A large number of the friends of the deceased and members of the Fire Department were present. Their evidence showed that the deceased and several other members of his Company, No. 13 Hose, were carrying their hose under an archway, when the wall forming the archway suddenly fell upon them. The Engineer, a moment previous, admonished them not to go underneath the archway, as this wall was then in a tottering condition, but his words were not understood. The deceased was buried so deeply under the pile of brick and mortar that it was some moments before he could be taken out by his companions. After his rescue he was found to be badly bruised, and his body seriously burned by the hot bricks. The medical evidence showed that death was caused by internal injuries and burns. A verdict was rendered by the jury in accordance with these facts. After the inquest was concluded the body was placed in a neat coffin, which had been previously prepared. On the lid was a silver plate, bearing the name of the deceased, his age and the name of the company to which he belonged.

Immediately after the announcement, on Saturday morning, of the death of the deceased, the Board of Directors of the Fire Department began to make the necessary arrangements for his funeral and interment. It was at first decided that the funeral should take place from his late residence, No. 7 Manhattan-place, but it was subsequently agreed that the funeral exercises should take place at 1 P. M. Sunday, at the Hospital.

Yesterday, at the hour designated, the inclosure in front of the Hospital was densely crowded with firemen. Those who could not get inside, remained drawn up in line in Duane-street and Broadway. The coffin was placed on a table, a few feet in front of the steps leading into the Hospital building. On the right side of the steps, on some boards temporarily placed there, were seated the family and immediate friends of the deceased. The left of the steps was occupied by the members of the company to which the deceased belonged.

The funeral exercises, which were conducted by the Rev. Mr. MCALLISTER, were brief, consisting only of a prayer and a few remarks. After recounting the perils attendant upon the proper discharge of a fireman's duties, and extolling the New-York firemen for their heroic fearlessness and chivalrous devotion to duty, he alluded to the deceased and the manner of his death. He said his death was more noble than death on the battle-field, for he was struck down while endeavoring to preserve life and property, and not while engaged in the destruction of his fellow-men and devastation of property. The deceased, he said, was a young man of worthy character and much promise, and his loss was not only a severe one to his family, but a grave one to the Fire Department.

As soon as Mr. MCALLISTER had concluded, the coffin was carried by the pall-bearers and placed in the hearse, which was drawn by four horses, and the procession started. About twenty-five carriages followed the hearse, and next came the members of the Fire Department, to the number of 5,000, walking six abreast. They were in citizen's dress, and each wore the Fireman's badge draped in mourning. The banner of the Fire Department was carried at the head of the procession. This banner and that of Hose Company No. 13, the company of which the deceased was a member, were the only banners in the procession. There was no band of music. The City Hall bell commenced to toll as the procession started. The procession moved up Broadway. Its length,—it took it nearly an hour to pass a given point,—the absence of music, and tolling of the City Hall bell, conspired to make the scene impressive. The body was taken to the Union Cemetery and there interred. The deceased was twenty-two years of age, unmarried, and was the main support of a widowed mother, and several brothers and sisters.

City Items.

THE RUTGERS FEMALE INSTITUTE.—A question of the removal of this important institution to the upper part of the City has been, for some time, under consideration. It had been understood that parties up town were ready on this condition to pledge themselves for a large sum, ($35,000,) to be added to the proceeds of the sale of the present buildings, and overtures and negotiations have been going on for some months. But the actual subscriptions were altogether inadequate, and bore no proportion to the value of the property for the purpose for which it was established in its present location in the Seventh Ward, and therefore furnished no sufficient inducement for removal. The stockholders, at a recent meeting, resolved that they would no longer consider the question of removal, and instructed the Trustees to continue the School, employing all suitable measures for making it permanent and increasingly efficient. The present number of pupils is a little over 200. The graduating class numbers 23. The Annual Commencement will take place in the Rutgers-street Church on July 1, and the exercises of the School after the vacation will be resumed on Sept. 13.

PROPOSED RE-ORGANIZATION OF THE NORMAL SCHOOL.—The report from the Executive Committee on Normal Schools, recommending "the re-organization of the Daily Normal School upon such a basis, that it shall furnish teachers for our Public Schools, who have received an education especially directed to that end," which was presented by Mr. EAGAN at a meeting of the Board of Education, May 19, proposes that on and after June 30, 1858, the present Daily Normal School be closed, and in its stead be organized a "Normal School for Females;" attached to which shall be a "Model School," or "School for Practice;" said "Model School" to be divided into three departments, and to consist of about one hundred and fifty scholars, between the ages of five and fifteen years, and to be graded the same as the ward schools, but to be under the control of the Normal School Committee. The teachers in this school to be a male principal, a vice-principal, a principal teacher in each department of study, and as many assistants as may be required; and in the "Model School" there is to be a superintendent and as many assistants as necessary.

Six terms, or three years, are to comprise the full course of study. No diploma is to be granted for less than two consecutive terms of attendance.

All applicants for admission must be residents of this City, and have attained 15 years of age. They must present satisfactory certificates of moral character, posses physical ability to teach, and declare their intention to teach in the Public Schools of New-York, to remain in the school the full number of terms, or so many of them as shall be necessary to complete the prescribed course of study; to observe faithfully all the rules and regulations of the school during their connection with it, and must possess the ability to pass a good examination in the studies of the school. The first term of the Normal School for females is to commence on the first Monday in September, 1858, and the first term of the "Model School" on the first Monday in March, 1859. The report will be considered at the next meeting of the Board.

EXAMINATIONS OF THE NORMAL SCHOOLS.—The Female Normal School Examination will commence on Monday, June 7, at 3½ o'clock P. M., in Ward School No. 44, corner of North Moore and Varick streets, and will be continued at the same hour and place, on June 9, 10, 14, 17, 18, 21, 23, 24, 28, 30, and July 1. The Graduating Class will pass an Oral Examination on the 8th of July, at the Hall of the Board of Education, to commence at 3 o'clock P. M. The Male Normal School will be examined June 11 and 25, at the Hall of the Board, to commence at 4 o'clock P. M. The Daily Normal School on the 15th and 22d of June, to commence at 9½ o'clock A. M. The Colored Normal School on the 27th of June, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

CONVENTION OF THE PSI UPSILON FRATERNITY.—The Twenty-fifth Annual Convention of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity will be held in this City at the Historical Society's building, on the 24th and 25th of June inst. The oration and poem will be delivered at the same place, on Thursday evening, June 24. EDWIN P. WHIPPLE, Esq., of the Gamma Chapter, will be the orator. The poet has not yet been selected.

OPENING OF ALBANY-STREET.—The Committee of the Board of Aldermen on Streets sat four hours, Saturday, listening to the arguments of counsel, in favor of and adverse to the proposed extension of Albany street through Trinity Church-yard. The Committee adjourned to report to the Board.

The "Fillmore" carriage and harness, presented to Ex-President FILLMORE by his political friends, was sold, Saturday, at auction by Mr. A. J. BLEECKER for the sum of $391.

The June Term of the Court of General Sessions commences to-day, before Recorder BARNARD. The Calendar contains a list of 109 cases, of which 31 are for grand larceny, 20 for burglary, 13 for assault and battery, and no less than 7 for murder. MARTIN DOWD will be tried for the murder of JOHN DOOLY; DANIEL CUNNINGHAM for the murder of "PAUDEEN;" PAUL HERNANDES for the murder of his wife; LEROY RUSHES for the murder of JOHN McCARTHY; HILTON, a colored man, for the murder of his reputed wife, and CHARLEY O'REILLY for the murder of WILLIAMS the sailor. JAMES P. FINLEY and ANN HOWLEY will also be tried for kidnapping a colored girl, with intent to sell her for a slave.

In the Supreme Circuit Court, the trial of CANGEMI, the alleged murderer of policeman ANDERSON, commenced. A panel of 1,000 jurors has been sworn. In the absence of the District Attorney, Mr. JOHN McKEON will prosecute the case. Judge WRIGHT will occupy the bench.

The Westchester County Pure Milk Association turned out on Saturday with a band of music (DODWORTH'S) and fourteen wagons, with horses decorated with ribbons, &c., and paraded the principal streets of New-York and Brooklyn, by way of calling attention to their enterprise.

First of June and the weather of the last few days has been uncomfortably warm. Summer commenced her term punctually. Last night a shower refreshed the air and made it somewhat cooler.

Archbishop HUGHES consecrated a Bell in St. Bridget's church, corner of Avenue B and 8th street last evening.

THE CENTRAL PARK.

Objections of Two of the Commissioners to the Plan Adopted.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The purchase of the land for the Central Park is believed to be the largest appropriation ever made by a single city for a public place to be devoted to health and pleasure, and is a striking evidence, not only of the wealth and liberality of the City, but of the high appreciation of the necessity which demanded its creation. The plan upon which it shall be laid out will hereafter be regarded as an exposition of the taste and skill of the present generation. It becomes also of supreme importance that the plan shall justify the large expenditure, and accomplish the objects for which the Park was established. Too much time, therefore, can hardly be given to maturing the plan of the Park now. Constructions once made are made forever, or can be removed only at great expense. There are three objects which are fundamental and must be embraced in every plan, in order to realize the great purpose of health and pleasure—these are a drive, a ride and a walk—and each one of these will best accomplish its object, in proportion as they are distinct from each other, and can be used and enjoyed separately and exclusively. Designs of mere taste must yield to these three cardinal objects—utility must not be sacrificed to beauty—indeed, they are inseparable, and that park is most beautiful which in the highest degree accomplishes the objects for which it is established. Our colleagues in the commission have adopted plan 33, designed by the late superintendent, now the architect in chief, as the final plan of the Park. Believing, after a most careful examination, that it failed in a remarkable degree to meet the objects we have named in a proper and adequate manner, we presented to our colleagues the result of our reflections, in eighteen separate amendments, for the purpose of correcting its errors and omissions. The manner in which these amendments were received and disposed of will appear by the annexed protest, which, having been rejected by the Board, we now publish for the information of the people, whose servants we are. They own the Park, and are most interested in its success. If we are wrong, thought and discussion will prove it; if we are right, the people may possibly find some means of averting the execution of a plan which they disapprove.

Although the amendments have been published, they refer so constantly to the plan that no one can fully understand them without having the plan before him, and we therefore seize this opportunity of stating briefly what they propose to accomplish.

THE DRIVE.

According to plan thirty-three, the entire drive below Ninety-sixth-street, embracing several miles in extent, is flanked on either side by the walk, thus assimilating the drive to the roadway of the streets and avenues, and destroying the appearance and illusion of a country road. We propose that the drive shall be devoted to its object singly and alone, cutting the sward on either side, and separate and distinct from the ride and the walk.

THE RIDE.

Plan thirty-three puts horsemen or equestrians on the drive with the carriages, and makes no separate provision for them whatsoever, except by building a new embankment against the outer embankment of the new Reservoir, and making a ride for them on the top and around it. As the embankment is in some places forty feet in height, (as high as the Reservoir at Forty Second-street,) the effect of horsemen riding upon it will, in our judgment, be fantastic and grotesque. We propose that the ride shall be constructed throughout the entire length of the park, intermediate the drive and the exterior wall, or the drive and the walk, as either may be best suited to the topography and the economical execution. And we cannot believe that, in the area of 750 acres, two and a half miles in length, and half a mile or three blocks more in width, it is impossible for a competent engineer to devise a ride, not only separate and distinct by itself, and therefore perfectly safe, but opening miles and miles to the pleasure and the benefit of manly and invigorating horsemanship. As the first object of the Park is to preserve and improve health, we consider the proper and adequate development of the ride as a paramount consideration, inferior only to the walk.

THE WALK.

The main walk of Plan No. 33 is, as before stated, on either side of the drive, separated from it not even by the protection of curb and gutter, but by turf, four feet wide. There is also a "promenade" approached by the drive, which must be crossed by pedestrians in order to reach it. It is, as its name signifies, appropriated to pedestrians, but is only the length of six streets—about the distance of Bleecker-street from Waverley-place. There is also a "Berceau walk," against or at the base of the walls and embankments of the two reservoirs; but these embankments come on the east within 135 feet of the Fifth-avenue, and on the west within 260 feet of the Eighth-avenue; and through these narrow passes horsemen, carriages and pedestrians must, by the plan, all go, in order to get from the lower to the upper portion of the Park. There are also many meandering paths. In our judgment, those provisions are wholly inadequate to meet the habits, tastes or expectations of the people, and indicate no true conception of the dignity which should belong to "the walk" of the Central Park. It should be its main and most distinguished feature, because it will give more pleasure and more health than all the other forms in which the Park can be used. It should proceed from entrances at which pedestrians alone should enter—the safety of age and infancy, and of women and children, demands that separate entrances should be provided for horses and carriages. It should also be stately in its proportions of width and length, and stately in the style of trees for its shade and protection. Such an avenue like any grand erection in architecture, excites elevation of mind and promotes order and good manners. It should be separate and distinct from the ride and drive, so that it may be free from the distraction, the noise, the dust and the danger of horsemen and carriages. It should, in its progress, present to the pedestrian every object of natural and artificial interest within the Park, including the observation of horsemen and carriages. Especially should the walk embrace and use the walls of the two reservoirs. They should be brought under frequent observation; they are immense artificial lakes, unrivalled in extent, and presenting a surface of water one hundred and fifty acres in extent—more than fifteen times the size of Washington-square. They embrace within their walls the contents of an entire river, brought from a distance of more than forty miles, and carried through an aqueduct supported by marble bridges and arches more majestic than that of Imperial Rome. A line-of-battle ship is impressive as the expression of the national power; these Croton works are not less suggestive of the wealth, the enterprise, the science and the sagacity of the people of New-York. The Architect-in-Chief considers that "the walks around the reservoirs must always be disappointing." He says "they are tanks or cisterns, on a large scale, it is true, but perfectly comprehensible and uninteresting after one or two visits of examination." In our judgment they are beautiful sheets of water, and should be treated and used as the jewels of the Park.

Such an avenue as we have sketched is presented by the second amendment. The entrances on Fifty-ninth-street from the Sixth and Seventh avenues are devoted to pedestrians exclusively—walks thence proceeding in a crescent, or in any other form to be designed, converge into a grand Cathedral avenue, advancing north in a direct line till it reaches the lakelets in the ravine at Seventy-third-street; thence spanning the ravine by a wire suspension bridge from which the drive and ride can be seen, it proceeds to the centre of the south wall of the reservoir. A flight of marble steps upon a marble platform in front of the wall, also faced with marble, thus presenting this jewel of the Park in a casket worthy of its priceless value, leads the pedestrian to the view of these beautiful sheets of water and the observation of the Croton Aqueduct, one of the greatest works of modern times. This elevation will afford fine views of the Park in every direction, and bring the drive and ride immediately under the inspection of those who walk. From the north side of the embankment of the new reservoir proceeds another grand avenue in a line run diagonally northwest to the brow of Observatory Hill, in the meantime spanning the lake at the foot of the hill by a bridge. The pedestrian is thus brought to the top of the hill designed as the rendezvous or place of reunion of all who either ride, drive or walk, having accomplished a walk of two miles and a half—the entire length of the Park.

The Architect-in-Chief objects to this walk, because, in his opinion, it belongs, not to a park, but to "palatial gardens;" that its straight lines of trees in stately architecture would make a sacrifice of the present scenery of the Park or a division of the landscape into two parts, and because it is "one great purpose" of the Park to supply such scenery as can be seen by the traveller "in the White Mountains or the Adirondacks." If it were true that, by the walk proposed, the scenery would be impaired (which we deny), it should nevertheless be made, because mere beauty must yield to necessity, and the great purpose of the Park must be fulfilled no matter what the sacrifice may be. But we dissent entirely from the theory which lies at the basis of the architect's objection. The Central Park, as its name imports, is to be in the very centre of an immense City, covering the entire island, and surrounded by the highest forms of artificial or civilized life, erected by the wealth and designed by the genius of man. Emerging from such a City into its Central Park, with scenery to remind one of "the White Mountains and the Adirondacks," will, in our judgment, be singularly unfortunate. The contrast will be sudden and violent—the effect, we apprehend, will be grotesque. Some years ago a fountain was erected in the Bowling Green, of the most wild and rustic character. Indeed, by itself, and in a suitable location, it might have been a success. Placed, however, in the Bowling Green, and surrounded by the architecture of civilized life, it shocked the public taste and was soon removed.

CROSS ROADS.

By law the Commissioners are not obliged to run any roads across the Park, and they should be made only so far as they are necessary to effect transit from one side of the island to the other. There will be little or no such business relations of one side with the other as to require vehicles of traffic to cross the Park. During the entire length of Broadway, above Canal-street, separating a compact population on either side of it, a vehicle of traffic is very seldom seen to cross it. If three blocks of land of the Park should intervene, all occasions for traffic across the Park will, in our judgment, very nearly disappear. By Plan 33, four transverse roads are designed, crossing the Park in a straight line, sunken eight or ten feet below the surface, and in some portions tunneled through intervening rocks. We consider these roads to be a blemish upon the plan, and will, if made, be a blight and deformity to the Park, irretrievable, and forever to be deplored. They will divide the Park into four different sections, and interrupt the drainage, both under and superficial, in the flow of water to the lakes. For the drive they must be crossed by four bridges going up on one side and four bridges coming down on the other, and where bridges are not erected for the drive, fences must be erected for the safety of ramblers, who would otherwise fall into those sunken roads. The amendments propose to abolish those roads entirely, and to substitute in their stead three cross-roads, running from each one hundred feet street in a winding way across the Park, following the topography, so that passage across the Park may be made, but not with such facility in grade and level as to invite passage for purposes of trade or traffic.

We omit a cross-road at Seventy-ninth street, which is also a street of one hundred feet, because its entrance on the Fifth avenue would be very high above the grade of the avenue; its passage along the wall of the Reservoir would interrupt the walk, and its termination on the Eighth-avenue, opposite Manhattan-square, would render it of no use to the public.

Other subjects are also embraced in the amendments, but the length of this paper compels us to forbear.

The Architect-in-Chief estimates the expense of the new embankment to be built around the new Reservoir for a ride, at $71,368, and of the sunken roads at $204,575.

It is very safe to say that the adoption of the amendments would save a sum not less than $300,000. Respectfully submitted,

ROBERT J. DILLON,
AUGUST BELMONT.

PROTEST OF MESSRS. DILLON AND BELMONT.

OFFICE COMMISSIONERS CENTRAL PARK,
June 3, 1858.

The undersigned, members of the Commission, protest against the resolutions of this Board upon the amendments proposed by them, to the plan of the Park.

On the 28th of April last, at the meeting of the Board, when the four prizes for plans were awarded, it was resolved that the award of the premiums did not commit the Board to either of them in the adoption of a final plan for execution, but that from the selected designs the Board would avail themselves of such variations as they might deem expedient.

On the 13th of May it was resolved that this Board will, at its next regular meeting, proceed to adopt a plan of the Park, in its general feature of entrances, drives, rides, walks and water.

At the next meeting of the Board, on the 18th May, the Board adopted Plan 33 as the plan of the Park, subject to such modifications as may from time to time be ordered by the Board; and thereupon, at that and subsequent meetings to which the subject was adjourned, we proposed eighteen modifications or amendments, which, in our judgment, were necessary to be made to Plan 33, in order to meet the just expectations and necessities of the people in the construction of the Park.

At the meeting of the Board on the 27th, the amendments were referred to the Architect-in-Chief to consider and report; and it was not surprising, as they proposed to modify his own plan, that at the next meeting, on the 31st of May, he reported substantially against them.

At that meeting, and pending the discussion of the first, second, third and fourth amendments, and before any vote was taken upon either, and without debating the other fourteen amendments, and without affording us the opportunity of at least expressing our views in regard to them, the Board passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That all amendments which have been proposed to the plan, not already passed upon by the Board, or which may be hereafter be proposed, be referred to the President and Architect-in-Chief, with instructions to report such of them to the Board as their judgment may determine to be desirable to have now incorporated into the plan as the work proceeds.

The resolution effectually disposes of all the amendments, and all others which individual commissioners may deem it their duty hereafter to suggest; and it is very clear that no amendments to the plan are at any time likely to be made, or even considered, unless they first meet the approbation of the Architect-in-Chief, whose plan they will propose to amend.

The final plan of the Park, therefore, is fixed as Plan No. 33, and the resolution of the 28th April and the expression of members, nearly unanimous, that it should be made up from the selected designs, are practically nullified and abandoned.

Against such conduct on the part of the majority of the Board we have no other remedy than to make our protest, and to ask that it be entered on the minutes.

ROBT. J. DILLON.
AUGUST BELMONT.

The amendments proposed by Mr. DILLON and seconded by Mr. BELMONT, to which reference is here made, were published in the TIMES of May 27. It is unnecessary, therefore, to repeat them here.

Naval Intelligence.

The United States sloop-of-war Constellation, Capt. C. H. BELL, arrived at this port on Saturday from Genoa, which port she left April 17. The following is a list of her officers: Captain, CHAS. H. BELL; Lieutenants, J. P. Bankhead, Charles M. Fauntleroy, Wm. F. Spicer, Edward Barrett, R. L. Law, C. F. Stanton; Surgeon, John A. Lockwood; Purser, John Johnson; Assistant Surgeon, W. M. Brown; First Lieutenant Commanding Marines, Thos. Y. Field; Captain's Clerk, W. D. Bell; Boatswain, John Burrows; Gunner, Eugene Mack; Carpenter, John Jarvis; Sailmaker, Francis Boom; Purser's Clerk, Charles T. Float.

The Constellation has been absent since August 9, 1855, when she sailed from Norfolk, and has been cruising in the Mediterranean ever since.

The number of ports actually visited during the cruise, is 28, but the ship called several times at the same ports, making her arrivals 52 in all, viz: English, 6; Portuguese, 2; Sardinian, 10; Neapolitan, 9; Turkish, 7; Spanish, 12; Grecian, 1; Tuscan, 1; French, 3; and Moorish, 1. Orders from the Navy Department have been at the Navy-Yard for some time, directing the Constellation, on her arrival, to be got ready at once for a cruise in the Gulf. A new crew will be shipped, and she will be probably ready to sail within a week or ten days.

The sloop-of-war Saratoga, is also ordered to the Gulf, her officers to report on the 16th; and the sloop Macedonian, Commander LEVY, sailed from Boston on Saturday afternoon, for the same destination.

Political.

The Hon. T. L. CLINGMAN, recently member of Congress from the Eighth District of North Carolina, has addressed a letter to his constituents on the occasion of accepting the appointment from the Governor as United States Senator in place of the Hon. ASA BRIGGS, resigned. He rehearses the history of the Slavery contest to show that the South has accomplished a substantial victory over Northern injustice, in securing the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, in obtaining access for Slavery to all the Territories, and in the enactment of a law admitting Kansas with Slavery, if the people wish it. The recent decision of the Supreme Court is also noted as a matter of special importance to the South. Mr. CLINGMAN says that the expenses of the Government have largely increased, owing partly to the extension of our territory, and partly to the fact that the Slavery agitation has diverted attention from measures of economy. The Tariff rates have nevertheless been very largely reduced. He opposes the project of dividing the public lands among the States, as certain to increase the taxes and as unconstitutional. He represents the Democratic Party as the only one from which proper legislation on these subjects can be expected, although he says he has never been governed in his actions by any mere party considerations.

Mr. HAYNE, late United States District-Attorney for Illinois, and hitherto a strong supporter of Judge DOUGLAS, has written a letter urging a necessity of a union of the Democratic Party, and taking the ground that, as the Kansas question has been settled, there can no longer be any reason for maintaining a position of hostility to the Administration.

A number of State Conventions are called to meet this month and next. Besides the Fusion demonstration of Anti-Lecomptonites at Harrisburg, Pa., the Republicans of Ohio are to meet at Columbus on Tuesday, July 13, when a vigorous effort will be made to effect a thorough Anti-Administration organization for that State. The call says:

"We ask the freemen of Ohio, without regard to their former political associations, to unite with us in administering such a stern rebuke to the arrogant Slave Power as the Empire State of the free and great West so justly demands. Let them select their wisest, ablest, purest men as delegates; and let the Grand Council of the representatives of Free Labor, on the anniversary of the passage of the glorious ordinance of 1787, which dedicated the soil of Ohio and the northwest to Freedom and free institutions forever, be such a demonstration as the cause and the times demand."

The Republicans of Maine will meet in State Convention at Augusta, on Thursday, June 24. The Vermont Republicans will meet at Montpelier on the following Tuesday.

Interesting from Mexico.

BOMBARDMENT AND CAPTURE OF TOBASCO BY THE ZULOAGA FORCES.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, May 30.

By the schooner W. W. Harkness, Capt. PETERSON, which arrived yesterday from Tobasco, we have full details of the attack of the Zuloaga forces on the city of Tobasco, and the forcing of it under the rule of his Government.

The city was bombarded, it appears, from the 9th of April to the 19th inst. The houses suffered very much from the fire of both parties, and the American Consul's house especially, which was in a right line between them. Mr. JOHNSON, however, afforded what protection he could to all who asked it of him; and he had at least some three hundred women and children at the Consulate. To provide for their support he had every day to go out, and we are assured that both parties had so much respect for him that on his appearing in the streets they suspended firing until he had passed the lines.

The Government captors, on taking possession of it, were fortifying and strengthening the city by every means in their power.

The steamer Guerrero, whose revolt from the Constitutionalists has already been announced to our readers, with her subsequent blockade of Vera Cruz, arrived at Tobasco on the 20th.

This makes, with Tampico, two ports now in the possession of the Zuloaga Government.

With respect to Tampico, private communications with which we are favored announce, in addition to the defeat of GARZA, that MIRAMON'S force, in San Luis has been increased to 4,000 men and 24 pieces of artillery, (probably including the force under Gen. MEJIA, which had advanced to Tampico and routed GARZA.) The result is that through Tampico as a port of entry merchants can introduce goods to the city of Mexico and adjacent populous territories. By Vera Cruz, the Rio Grande or any other point they would have double duties to pay—one to the Liberal forces and the other to the Central Government: by this route they have only one. This will give resources to the Zuloaga party, at this time a matter of vital importance.

Personal.

The late Mr. Bartholomew, the sculptor, left Rome at the end of March, in company with the artist Osgood. Among the unfinished works which he leaves is a monument for a child of Col. Colt, of Hartford. On the morning of his departure from Rome, he received an order from Mr. Stevens, of Boston, for a copy of his "Calypso," and another for any statue he might choose, at a cost of $1,000.

C. J. McIlvaine, Esq., who went to Kansas as Private Secretary to Governor Walker, has just returned from the Territory, and corroborates the stories of the outrages committed by Montgomery's marauders. Mr. McIlvaine will probably return to the Territory as general arbitrator on the the land litigations at Lecompton.

The charges against Commander Boutwell, U. S. N., upon which he is to be court-martialed at Washington the 14th inst., are said to be of a very grave character, and it is presumed that several questions of importance, in reference to the regulations and discipline of the Navy, will come before the Court.

A young mechanic in Baltimore has constructed a complete model of Mount Vernon, house, estate, tomb and all, in wood. It is said to be a curious specimen of the art of carving. It occupies a space of twenty square feet.

The sculptor Barbee has in progress at his studio in Baltimore several new marbles, among which are the "Young Republican," "Coquette," "Gratitude," and some busts of prominent men. His "Fisher Girl," commenced in Italy, is nearly finished.

The Secretary of the Navy has issued a general order for the usual manifestations of respect to the memory of Commodore Ap Catesby Jones.

Miss Sarah Pellet, a lady who has tarried in Utah, is delivering lectures in Boston on the Mormons.

Obituary.

George P. McCulloch, Esq., a distinguished citizen of New-Jersey, died in Morristown on Tuesday, aged 83. He was born in Bombay, his father being a Scotch officer in the East India service. He was employed during the first Consulate of Napoleon, in various financial negotiations for the East India Company, and came to New-York in 1805. He settled soon after at Morristown, where he has since resided. He was the projector of the Morris Canal, and took an active interest in public affairs.

Mr. LUTHER HARRIS, of Goshen, N. Y., died a few days ago, in the old homestead, a mile from that village, which he and his wife had occupied for the long period of fifty six years. Mr. HARRIS was one of the oldest residents of Orange county, and died at the age of 77. His wife survives him.

Hon. ROBERT PLATT, one of the oldest residents of Northern New York, died at Plattsburg on the 16th ult., aged 79. He was a member of Assembly in 1816, and ran again, but unsuccessfully, against AZARIAH C. FLAGG, in 1828.

Judge Woodworth died at Albany, on Tuesday at the age of 89. In 1819, Governor Clinton appointed him a Justice of the Supreme Court. He remained on the bench until 1823.

Colonel George M. Thacher, Danish Consul at Boston, died on Tuesday.

Police Intelligence.

THE DIFFICULTY IN THE SIXTH-STREET METHODIST COLORED CHURCH.—The troubles at the Church in Sixth-street have not yet been brought to a peaceful termination. On Saturday Justice BRENNAN issued warrants for the arrest of several of the members charged with creating a disturbance at a meeting held at the Church on Friday evening. The entire difficulty arises from the recent appointment by the Methodist Episcopal Conference of a minister over the Church, and the refusal of the acting clergyman, the Rev. L. Tilman, to abdicate. Mr. Tilman has his friends, and the newly appointed minister has his adherents, and between the two factions there is a lively struggle for the mastery. The parties for whose arrest warrants were issued have not yet had a hearing. There was no disturbance in the Church yesterday. The Rev. Mr. Tilman conducted the exercises as on previous Sundays.

ASSAULT WITH A HATCHET.—Antoine Foose, a German peddler, was arrested Saturday for assaulting Wilhelmine Baumaster with a hatchet. Both lived in the tenement house No. 133 Cannon-street, where, getting into a dispute about some trifling matter, it is alleged that Foose assaulted the complainant with a hatchet, terribly cutting his arms and body. Justice BRENNAN committed the accused to prison, in default of $1,000 bail, to await the result of the injuries.

CHARGE OF RAPE.—A ship-caulker, named Jas. Burns, was arrested Saturday on a charge of committing a rape upon Fanny Williams, about four months ago. The complainant alleges that five ruffians committed the same offence upon her. One of them, Wm. Brown, has been tried and convicted upon the charge. The prisoner was committed to answer in default of $2,600 bail.

STABBING IN THE BOWERY.—At 2 o'clock, yesterday morning, as a gang of Bowery boys were coming down the Bowery, they met a company of young fellows going up-town. The two parties, after bandying a few words, fell to beating one another. In the course of the fight, James Quinn was stabbed seriously. The injured youth was taken to his residence, No. 154 Forsyth-street. No arrests were made.

STABBING ON THE FIVE POINTS.—Timothy J. Sullivan and Patrick Shay, Irishmen living on the Five Points, yesterday afternoon had a quarrel, both having been drinking freely, in the course of which Sullivan stabbed his opponent in the face, inflicting a serious wound. The Sixth Ward Police arrested Sullivan and took him before Justice OSBORN, who locked him up in the Tombs. Shay was removed to the City Hospital.

A CONFIDENCE OPERATOR REARRESTED.—Edward Lilly, celebrated for his numerous shrewd "confidence" operations, was detected on Saturday coming out of an omnibus in Eighth-avenue. He was held to bail about two months ago to answer for one of his victimizing operations in this City, but when the case was called for trial, could not be found. He is said to have been lately at work in Philadelphia, Baltimore, New-Orleans and other Southern cities. He was locked up to be tried on the previous charge.

Jersey City Items.

DISTURBANCE AMONGST FEMALES.—About 2 o'clock, yesterday morning, a desperate fight occurred between MARY McCARTY and CATHARINE McNULTY, residing on the same floor in a house on Railroad-avenue, near Monmouth street. The females had been drinking freely during the fore part of the night, and the liquor had the effect of raising Mrs. McNULTY'S jealousy, and she accordingly concluded to seek redress for her real or imaginary wrongs. She accordingly seized a large axe and assailed her neighbor's door, which was soon demolished. Mrs. McCARTY was prepared for the affray, and as soon as her antagonist entered commenced to hurl the glassware with good effect, and finally Mrs. McCARTHY succumbed and dropped. At this stage of the proceedings, Officers CHASE and THOMPSON arrived, and arrested Mrs. McNULTY. The other woman was lying upon the floor bleeding profusely from a cut in the temple. A physician was called in, and it was found that an artery had been severed, but the wound was not of a very serious nature.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A colored woman, twenty-six years of age, named SARAH ANN BERRY, residing in a rookery in the rear of No. 100 Newark-avenue, was, yesterday, found dead in her room. She had been out as usual during the fore part of the day, and in the afternoon went to lie down, and, shortly after, was discovered by the inmates in a sitting posture, leaning over a tub, dead. Coroner McANALLY investigated the case, and found that death was caused by excessive use of cheap liquor.

FIRE AT BERGEN HILL.—About 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon, a fire broke out in a stable at Bergen Hill, owned by JOHN J. NEWKIRK and occupied by JOHN JONES as a cow and horse stable. A number of the Jersey City Fire Companies turned out, but before their arrival the stable was burned to the ground. The loss is about $400. It is supposed that some children playing in the stable with matches, accidentally occasioned the fire.

Fires.

FIRE IN EIGHTEENTH-STREET.—FOUR HORSES BURNED.—At 3 yesterday morning a fire broke out in the three-story brick house in Eighteenth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, occupied by C. A. DOUGHTY and THOS. BURROUGHS as a carpenter's shop. Messrs. DOUGHTY & BURROUGHS estimate their loss at $3,000—insured for $1,200 in the Pacific and St. Nicholas Insurance Companies. The fire communicated to a stable adjoining, owned by Mr. A. SCHNEIDER, which was burned, together with four horses and one cow. No insurance. A shed belonging to Mr. E. HUNT, was also burned—loss $100; covered by insurance in the Rutgers Insurance Company. Adjoining the shed was a lumber yard, which was stored with an immense amount of lumber, and it was only through extraordinary exertions of the firemen that the fire did not extend to the yard.

IN SULLIVAN-STREET.—About 5½ o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire occurred in the building rear of No. 144 Sullivan, near Houston-street. The damage done did not exceed $5.

IN HUDSON-STREET.—At 7½ o'clock yesterday afternoon a fire broke out in and completely destroyed an old frame building Nos. 20 and 22 Hudson-street. It was occupied for carpenters' shops—on the first floor by M. H. SMITH, and on the second by ALFRED CHEESBOROUGH, whose combined loss on tools, &c., amounted to about $200. The building was valued at $300. There was no insurance on either building or stock. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

FIRE IN AVENUE B.—At 2½ A. M. on Saturday, a fire occurred in the cabinet shop of SEBASTIAN FREDERICKS, in the rear of No. 226 Avenue B. The damage was about $100. Insured.

IN SEVENTH-AVENUE.—At a late hour on Friday evening a fire was discovered in a wheelwright shop attached to the stables of the Seventh-avenue Omnibus line. It was extinguished by a few pails of water.

Coroner's Inquests.

THE MURDER IN A WATER-STREET GROGGERY.—An inquest was held, Saturday, at the City Hospital, upon the body of JAMES C. WILLIAMS, the sailor who was shot on the 19th ult., by CHARLES O'REILLY, proprietor of the porter house No. 332 Water-street. The evidence corroborated the statement concerning the affair previously published in the TIMES. A dispute arose between O'REILLY and the deceased about the payment for some drinks, when O'REILLY, without provocation, took a revolver from a shelf and deliberately shot the deceased, the ball passing into the mouth and lodging in the thorax, against the phrenic nerve at its origin. The Jury rendered a verdict of unjustifiable shooting, and the Coroner committed O'REILLY to prison to await the action of the Grand Jury. The accused is only 22 years of age, and alleged at his examination he committed the act in self-defence.

BALLARD, SHUTE & CO., No. 45 Broadway.

☞ June.

With roses crowned, and ceaseless sound
Of song-birds in the forest singing,
While flushed and bright, through fields of light,
Young butterflies are round us winging.
In meadows fair and gardens rare,
Asleep beneath the sunny noon—
Above, around, each sight and sound
Proclaims the sway of sovereign June!

But more than flowers and breathing bowers,
In woman's eye we note the season.
When warm and flushed she listens, hushed,
To vows that move both heart and reason.
And never yet will he regret
The rashness of his fond petition,
Who pleads in June the priceless boon
Of love returned—on one condition.

And that condition simply reads,
That when he kneels to win her glances,
His dress shall suit the warm pursuit,
And be as airy as her fancies
In SUMMER CLOTHES let him propose—
No woman yet could answer coldly
A man who in SMITH'S SUMMER STYLE
Addressed her frankly, warmly, boldly.

GWYNNE & DAY'S
BANK NOTE REGISTER
AND DETECTOR OF COUNTERFEITS.

This work has received the unqualified approval of the Press, and is pronounced superior to any of the kind issued. It is printed on better paper, and from larger and more readable type than any of our cotemporaries, and is sold cheaper. It combines a financial paper with a counterfeit detector.

Each number contains a full description of the latest counterfeits issued, a stock table exhibiting the daily prices of stocks sold at the New-York Board of Brokers, a specie table containing the values of foreign and American coins, and a table exhibiting the different rates of discount on bank notes in New-York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago.

In addition to these features, it combines a carefully written money article, editorials containing many valuable suggestions on the subject of the currency and the banks, together with such items as are of interest. In its appropriate column will be found a list of doubtful or uncertain banks, a list showing the current value of broken bank notes, a review of the produce markets, important extracts from financial reports.

GWYNNE & DAY'S
BANK NOTE REGISTER
AND DETECTOR OF COUNTERFEITS.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS:

From the Independent, New-York.

We most cheerfully commend this new periodical to the attention of merchants, bankers and business men generally. It is published by Gwynne & Day No. 12 Wall-st., and contains all the information usually found in a bank note detector, with much additional matter of interest to every intelligent reader.

From the Churchman, New-York.

The publishers of this journal are gentlemen of known integrity and standing, and their enterprise in publishing an independent and reliable paper of this kind, in opposition to those controlled or influenced in one way or another by dishonest bankers in their schemes for deceiving the public will doubtless be appreciated by the community at large, to whose interests the new journal is solely and entirely to be devoted. The subject-matter, besides, is very conveniently arranged, and the whole is altogether well got up.

GWYNNE & DAY'S
BANK NOTE REGISTER
AND DETECTOR OF COUNTERFEITS.

From the New-York Herald

This publication is the most comprehensive of its character yet issued. Its statistical information, its editorial articles, the reliability of its quotations, its promptitude in the publication of new counterfeits, together with its neat and plain typographical appearance, recommend it to every business man.

From the New-York Times.

Messrs Gwynne & Day, of No. 12 Wall-st., send out the first number of their Weekly Bank Note Register, in which they promise not only a fair report of all the good banks, but a steady exposure of all "sham or bogus" concerns which are, or may be established either for the purposes of speculations or with the intention of defrauding the public."

From the New York Tribune.

Gwynne & Day have established a Bank Note Register, containing information of great value to every one handling bank notes.

GWYNNE & DAY'S
BANK NOTE REGISTER
AND DETECTOR OF COUNTERFEITS.

From the New-York Evening Express.

This book is a marked improvement upon present works of the kind, and sure of success, as such a detector is indispensable.

From the Pennsylvanian.

It is a truly valuable and comprehensive bank-note guide, and shows up some of the "wild cat" and irresponsible concerns that are now so thickly springing up.

From the Boston Traveller.

The Register is published weekly, and combines the features of a financial paper with that of a counterfeit detector. Each number contains ably-written articles upon banking and other financial matters, quotations of the markets in Boston, New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, besides a regular bank note list, corrected weekly. The Register will be a valuable and useful book for every counting-room and store; its handsome typographical appearance and cheapness, besides the quantity of useful information it contains, will recommend it to public favor.

GWYNNE & DAY'S
BANK NOTE REGISTER
AND DETECTOR OF COUNTERFEITS.

From the Waverley Magazine.

"Bank Note Register." A new Bank Counterfeit Detector has just been started in New York under the above title, which will no doubt supersede all others, as it is to be issued every week, and will be entirely independent of all bank influence and expose fraud in whatever shape and by whoever committed. Such works have generally been published by brokers, who get a large bonus from bogus banks for redeeming their bills and keeping up their credit. The price is only five cents a copy, or $2 a year, and can be had of all the booksellers. We hope this work will be the means of purifying the currency of the country, and be a reliable source from which all can obtain information on banks and of all other financial matters.

From the Boston Post.

This periodical evinces much care in its arrangement, and an originality in its editorial conductorship that reflects credit upon the originators. The idea of combining a financial paper with a detector is most admirable.

GWYNNE & DAY'S
BANK NOTE REGISTER
AND DETECTOR OF COUNTERFEITS.

From the Boston Herald.

Gwynne & Day's Counterfeit Detector, a weekly publication, is one of the very best of its class ever issued. It is published at No. 12 Wall-street, New-York.

Our readers will perceive that our quotations of money are lower than those in similar publications, and we are always prepared to buy at the rates quoted. Letters with subscription money should be addressed

THE "OLD DOMINION" COFFEE POT

Thousands of this new COFFEE POT have already been sold, and the demand from all parts of the United States is rapidly on the increase. Wherever introduced it has given the most complete satisfaction.

THE OLD DOMINION COFFEE POT

Makes better coffee than it is possible to obtain in any other way, because, by an ingenious but simple arrangement, the housekeeper may boil her coffee for any length of time without loss of aroma, thus securing all the elements of the coffee in their natural and proportional combinations.

THE OLD DOMINION COFFEE POT

Is the most economical, for nothing being lost by evaporation in boiling, one-fourth less coffee is required while the beverage is stronger, more fragrant, and more delicious.

THE OLD DOMINION COFFEE POT

Gives a healthy beverage. Nervous, dyspeptic, and bilious persons, who have not dared to use coffee for years, have been able to drink their favorite beverage again when made in this new boiler, and without an occurrence of any of the old unpleasant consequences. It is healthy, because by the use of a condenser, evaporation is prevented, and the coffee can be boiled long enough to release all the natural elements of the berry, and get them in just proportions in the beverage.

THE OLD DOMINION COFFEE POT

Never fails to do its work right. Cook cannot spoil your cup of coffee by neglect or forgetfulness, after she has placed the boiler on the stove or range.

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

Among diseases, Dyspepsia and Diarrhœa rank as most difficult to cure. We are pleased to have it in our power to point out a remedy which has proved effectual in many cases, and which we can safely recommend as a certain and infallible cure. It has been the means of rescuing thousands from an untimely grave, and given the glow of health to many a lean and cadaverous form. The medicine we have reference to is HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS. These Bitters, whose virtues are promulgated through the State, are continually increasing in the favor of the public, and, from the many cures they have effected, have doubtless the ascendency over any other preparations before the public.

WOOD'S BUILDING'S,
TEMPLE OF ETHIOPIAN MINSTRELSY,
Nos. 561 and 563 Broadway, near Prince st.
TO THE PATRONS OF INNOCENT AND INSTRUCTIVE AMUSEMENTS.

Having for many weeks used every available means that could be made subservient, for the production of A NOVELTY unsurpassed in GRANDEUR, MECHANICAL EFFECTS AND ARTISTIC SKILL, to anything ever before offered to the public, I will present on MONDAY EVENING, JUNE 7, 1858,

as the result accruing from this combination of CAPITAL, ENERGY AND TALENT, A STUPENDOUS MOVING PANORAMA OF THE HUDSON RIVER FROM NEWBURG TO NEW-YORK, 1,800 FEET IN LENGTH,

Painted by Signor DELAMANO and assistants, from CORRECT SKETCHES made by superior and reliable artists. EVERY LANDSCAPE, OBJECT AND BUILDING has its peculiarity of form and color in minute detail, TRUTHFULLY TRANSFERRED UPON THE CANVASS.

To make the illusion perfect, a STEAMBOAT OF GREAT DIMENSIONS HAS BEEN PLACED UPON THE STAGE, WITH WORKING MACHINERY, &c., bearing its living freight to the place of destination. The audience will thus, in imagination, be placed as actual travelers upon this noble river, reviewing its splendid scenery.

To render this GREAT WORK OF ART AMUSING AND INSTRUCTIVE, AN INTRODUCTORY AND DESCRIPTIVE SKETCH has been written by SYLVESTER BLEEKER, in which all the points of interest will be commented upon.

For the production of superior effects, the boat is supposed to leave Newburg at 3 P. M., arriving at New-York in the evening, exhibiting the ILLUMINATION OF THE CITY.

Previous to the Panorama will be exhibited new and mirth-provoking acts of NEGRO MINSTRELSY.

Notwithstanding the IMMENSE OUTLAY attending this enterprise, the price of admission will still remain 25 CENTS TO ALL PARTS OF THE HOUSE.

H. WOOD,
Proprietor.

BARNUM'S AMERICAN MUSEUM.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The Managers of this favorite establishment, encouraged by their CONSTANT SUCCESS in pleasing the public, as is evinced by the THRONGS OF VISITORS which CROWD THE MUSEUM every day and evening, have again made a most LAVISH OUTLAY OF MONEY, in order to secure valuable, rare and attractive novelties for their patrons.

Although it is conceded that no place of amusement in the world provides one quarter of the attractions offered here for the same price of admission, yet, relying on the IMMENSE NUMBERS of persons who continually patronize them, the Managers feel justified in INCREASING THEIR EXPENSES beyond all former precedent, in order to add to the pleasure of their visitors.

Those who visit the Museum this week, will find that on no former occasion have the attractions been so numerous, complete and valuable as at present. Rich and rare additions are continually being made to every department of the Museum, while the dramatic representations are unrivaled by any other establishment in this country.

The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all proposals, if not satisfactory. Proposals must be accompanied by not less than two average specimens of each size of tile, and of the collars for connecting them, and manufacturers must be prepared to furnish, if required, one thousand of each size, on or before June 16, 1858, which shall not be inferior to the samples presented.

Contractors will be allowed to manufacture the tile upon the ground if they wish. In case they should do so, such clay and fuel as the Park affords would be placed at their disposal.

The Weather—Weather Report for May.

The notations of the mercury were made at 6 o'clock A. M., from a thermometer hanging on the north side of the main building, (of Bloomingdale Asylum,) which stands on high ground on One Hundred and Seventeenth street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues.

The weather of the entire month of May was of a very uncertain character, unless, indeed, so much of the uncertainty prevailed as to constitute it a decided certainty, the rain of one day being certain to be succeeded by the rain of another day, which was varied only at 5 or 6 of the diurnal periods, when overhanging clouds still prevailed as if to keep us apprised of the unerring intent of the rain to visit us again.

During the night of the 11th we had some thunder and lightning, which, it was premised, would cause the cherries to blast, and upon examination we found that some of the buds had been destroyed, either from the peculiar electrical condition of the atmosphere or other attending cause, but as the trees blossomed very full, we look, in the exuberance of our hopes—sun permitting—for increased perfection in the uninjured portion, that will more than compensate for the loss.

The morning of the 13th opened very fine, but very soon changed its character.

The 21st, 22d, 23d and 24th were attended with a great growth of vegetation, the mercury rising rapidly on the 23d, and the fine weather of these four days was only compromised by slight showers.

It certainly rained more or less on 21 of the first 27 days of the month and some assert even more. On the last day (31st) the weather was very fine and has so continued until now; the different plantings of peas seeming to vie with each other for precedence.

The grass is very heavy and other crops look well, and the apple trees, or many of them, are literally teeming with young fruit.

I have been desired by several persons to give the indications of the rain guage, which I will endeavor to do hereafter, and only regret that its valuable services should have passed unheeded the last two months.

Yours respectfully,
M. DAME,
Warden.

The Perils of Boat-Sailing.

TWO BOATS CAPSIZED—SIX LIVES LOST.

Friday afternoon four men, named HENRY CEAZER, JOHN BOGERT, FREDERICK SCOTT, and WM. PAYNTON, took a sail-boat at Penny Bridge and proceeded to the lower Bay on a fishing excursion. The day passed pleasantly until they started for home at about 6 o'clock, when a fresh wind commenced blowing from off shore, and after encountering great difficulties, they succeeded in beating into Gowanus Bay about 8 o'clock. Here, when within half a mile of the landing place, a sudden squall capsized the boat, and the occupants were for some time left struggling in the water. They finally succeeded in reaching the boat, which was bottom-up, and clung to it for life. The wind increased, and drifted them into the Bay, towards the Narrows. They had floated in this manner for nearly three hours, when BOGERT said he could hold out no longer, slipped off into the water, a wave washed over him, and that was the last seen of him by his companions. Another hour passed, when SCOTT and CEAZER gave out and dropped into the water and immediately sunk. Mr. PAYNTON, though quite exhausted, still managed to keep hold of the boat, and floated for another hour, until near the light house at Fort Hamilton, when fortunately a boat belonging to the lighthouse, came near enough to him to hear his cries for help. When rescued, he had been in the water five hours, and was so exhausted that he fainted, and an hour elapsed before he was restored sufficiently to tell what had occurred.

Mr. PAYNTON is a jeweler on Twenty-first-street, near Fourth-avenue.

Mr. BOGERT was a wheelright on Third-avenue, near Twenty-fourth-street.

Mr. SCOTT was a machinist, and lived on Twenty-second-street.

Mr. CEAZER lived on Third-avenue.

The persons drowned all leave families. The bodies have not been recovered.

Yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, a sail-boat containing three men, named JEREMIAH ELLIOTT, CHARLES BASSETT and JOHN ROSE, all of the Seventeenth Ward, was capsized by a sudden squall in the East River, off the Tenth-street Ferry-slip, Greenpoint, and all on board were drowned. The bodies have not been recovered. ROSE was a brass-finisher, and resided at No. 180 Graham-avenue, where he leaves a family. The other two were single men.

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-THREE ADDITIONS TO MR. BEECHER'S CHURCH.—Yesterday the crowd at Mr. H. W. BEECHER's Church was even larger than it usually is—hundreds were obliged to leave for lack of seats. It was Communion Sabbath, and it was known that there would be a large number admitted to the Church on profession of faith. The pulpit was ornamented with bouquets of flowers. On the platform beside his son sat the venerable Dr. LYMAN BEECHER. The first five rows of pews in front of the pulpit were surrendered to the new members—163 in all. Of these some 25 were from other churches. The ordinance of baptism by immersion Mr. BEECHER had lately administered to 14. It was administered by sprinkling to 50 yesterday. After the reception of the new members, Mr. BEECHER delivered a sermon intended for their special encouragement, from the words, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." After sermon, an invitation was given to all Christians, without regard to sectarian denomination, or whether members of churches or not, to partake of the Lord's Supper. About two thousand persons remained and communed. The morning prayer meetings in the Church continue with unabated interest. It was just a month that some 300 persons joined this Church.

About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a small sail-boat, containing two boys, upset in the North River near the Jersey City ferry-house. The boys clung to the boat and drifted up the river with the tide. A boat put out to their assistance from a schooner, but the boys refused to desert their vessel, and continued with it until they drifted against the Paterson Pier, where they landed in safety.

IMPORTANT MOVEMENT AMONG THE FIREMEN.—At a meeting of the Board of officers of the Northern District Fire Department on Friday evening last, the following ordinance passed by the Board of Fire Commissioners was read and unanimously approved:

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of each and every fireman to prevent boys or disorderly characters from congregating in or about the place of deposit of their various apparatus, and no person will be allowed hereafter to meet or assemble in any of the houses connected with this Department other than members and exempt members, or persons over eighteen years of age, introduced by members of the Company so visited, who shall be responsible for their conduct during such visits. It shall also be the duty of such firemen to see that good order is preserved in and about the houses occupied by their respective Companies, and to prevent any persons from congregating on the walks in front of the houses of their said apparatus.

SEC. 2. In going to or returning from a fire, or an alarm of fire, the drag rope shall be the proper place for the firemen, except the officers in command, and it shall be their duty to prevent all boys and noisy or improper persons from taking hold of the rope. And no person other than a member, or exempt member of the department, shall be allowed to take the tongue or tiller or have any command of any apparatus. Each and every officer in command of a company, shall be held responsible for his actions while exercising command over any fire apparatus, or for any wilful neglect or violation of any of the duties incumbent upon him.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of each and every company, on an alarm of fire being given, to proceed with all due diligence, and by the direct route, to the fire or to the place where the said alarm originated, unless otherwise directed by an Engineer, avoiding all lying-in-waits, or any departure from their usual route, either in going or returning, for the purpose of racing with any other company.

SEC. 4. Any officer or member of the Fire Department who shall violate any of the ordinances relative to the Fire Department, or who shall wilfully or knowingly consent to, or assist in any violation of the same, shall be liable to suspension or expulsion from the Fire Department. And any company so found guilty of a violation of any of the ordinances of the Fire Department shall be liable to be disbanded.

FRANCIS MCAVOY, a resident of North Southstreet, having read in the papers that lager-bier was not intoxicating, tried the experiment on Friday night last. After partaking of the sixth glass he went home and stabbed his wife in several places about the neck and chest, but fortunately without doing serious injury. FRANCIS was arrested and committed to the cells. He says that if lager-bier is not intoxicating it is capable of getting a man into a bad scrape. He is willing to swear now that lager-bier is very exhilarating.

FUNERAL OF EX-ALDERMAN O'NEIL.—The funeral of Ex-Alderman O'NEIL, of the Second Ward, took place yesterday afternoon. The services took place in the St. James Roman Catholic Church, and the remains were intered at Flatbush. The Mayor, a number of Aldermen and Ex-Aldermen were among the large concourse of citizens who attended the funeral.

PICKPOCKETS IN CHURCH.—A Miss RICE, of Lansingburg, N. Y., while attending Plymouth Church, yesterday afternoon, had a gold watch and chain stolen from her person. The thief escaped.

The case was submitted to the Jury at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. At 3 o'clock the Jury came in and rendered a verdict of manslaughter in the third degree, much to the astonishment of everybody.

THE CASE OF THOMAS KELLY.—THOS. KELLY is indicted for killing his wife, a few weeks ago, at the corner of Prospect and Navy streets, and at the conclusion of the above case he was arraigned for trial. A Jury was impannelled without much difficulty, when the Court adjourned till to-day.

ROMAN CATHOLIC ORPHAN ASYLUM.—The new Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum building, recently erected on Bedford-avenue, will be formally opened next Monday. The building, and ground upon which it stands, cost about $40,000, all but $11,000 of which has been paid.

A house at the corner of Van Brunt and Sullivan streets, was damaged by fire, Saturday morning last, to the extent of $50.

A child of JAMES COX, residing at the corner of Bridge and York streets, was severely injured, Saturday, by falling into an unprotected area way.

A little son of FRANCIS WOOD, corner of Vine and Columbia streets, was accidentally smothered in bed on Friday night last. Coroner REDDING held an inquest, when a verdict of death from accidental causes was rendered.

MONDAY, June 7—A. M.

The Foreign Trade at the port of New-York, the past week, amounted, in the Import entries, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper, to $2,288,889, as against $4,284,107 the week ending June 6, last year. The Export Clearances of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods, for the week, amounted to $1,224,175, as against $1,139,714 same time last year. The Export of Specie, direct, was only $51,425, and via Boston, as against $489,668 same week last year direct, and $1,220,000 via Boston. The Specie balance in the New-York Sub-Treasury on Saturday afternoon, stood $5,263,348, against $6,398,562 at the close of the previous week. Of this difference, $700,000 went by express to New-Orleans and Washington City, and the remainder, $435,214, will count in favor of the Bank reserve, which, averaging $31,496,144 last Monday—the average being rather a rising one—is expected to exceed thirty-two millions on the Statement to be made up this afternoon. The export demand for Bullion has almost entirely ceased, and but little disturbance is looked for to the Bank movement from the ruling of Foreign Exchanges for some weeks to come. The rates on London, for Bank bills, have fallen to 109⅜@109⅝, and for merchant bills to 108⅞@109¼. The Government disbursements continue large, a good part of the Gold going to the South and West for distribution, but soon to return to the banking centres. The large payments on and near the Western frontier, on Army contracts, have already contributed to impart ease and abundance to the St. Louis Money market, and will no doubt facilitate mercantile collections in and from that quarter. The last installment of the original Treasury Bills, authorized by Congress, will be awarded to the lowest bidders at Washington on Monday next, the 14th inst. The amount remaining undistributed is $4,000,000. As the present bills bearing 4½@5 ꝑ cent. are sought for at a premium of ⅜@½ ꝑ cent. premium, and no further opportunity will be afforded for taking the bills direct from the Department—at least until the original issues return through the Custom House to be canceled and replaced with others—the competition for the loan on Monday promises to be quite active. The money market continues to favor the Secretary, and the comparative absence of employment, in a temporary way, on the Stock Exchange, renders these Government bills peculiarly desirable both to banks and private money lenders. We quote demand loans on Wall-street collateral at 4@5 ꝑ cent. A good many deposits are left with the old brokers on State and other undoubted dividend securities, as low as 3 ꝑ cent. Discounts go at 4@5 on short bills, and 5@6 ꝑ cent. on paper outside the usual bank practice as to date. The general market for money is unusually quiet, and the same remark applies to Foreign Exchange. Both would probably be offered below current quotations, if mere cheapness would tempt more business of a legitimate trade character.

The Custom House returns of the Trade at this port for eleven months of the current Treasury year, which we published a few days ago, make the Imports of Foreign Goods from the 1st of July,

The above figures show a somewhat singular market through the week, and the closing sales of the low-priced Railway Shares indicate an extreme depression in this class of speculative Stocks. They were influenced in no inconsiderable degree by the rapid decline in New-York and Erie, which succeeded the half-yearly statement of the Company made to the general meeting of the stock and bondholders on Thursday evening. Besides which, most of the jobbers at the Board, availing of the slackness of outside orders with the commission brokers, are at present operating on the Bear side, and seem disposed to follow down the non-dividend Railways almost to the panic prices of last Fall. The resistance to this movement by the Bulls is only felt in New-York Central, Rock Island, and Reading, which, after a fluctuation of 2 ꝑ cent through the week left off slightly better than on Saturday week. The daily sales of all three have been quite considerable and for the larger part upon contract. Illinois Central has also stood up against the general decline on the Share list, because of English orders, and Panama on account of the near approach of a 6 ꝑ cent half yearly dividend. The fluctuations have been widest in Galena and Chicago, first from 86¼ to 89 and then down to 85¼ ꝑ cent. on speculations, for and against the question of the Summer dividend soon to be determined. Delaware and Hudson rose from 105 to 108 ꝑ cent., on the calculation that the June dividend will be 4 ꝑ cent., but on Saturday sellers appeared at 106 ꝑ cent. The two Wisconsin Roads are considerably lower, La Crosse on the recent developments of corruption, and Milwaukee on the difficulty encountered in funding the floating debt with a third mortgage. Southern Michigan and Cleveland and Toledo have sympathized, as non-dividend roads, with the decline in Erie. Hudson River, after advancing 1 ꝑ cent., closed about the same as on Saturday week. Pacific Mail is in good request, and 3 ꝑ cent. advance was established on the close of the week. On the State list, a regular and free demand for Virginias and Missouris advanced the price 1 ꝑ cent., and Tennessees were steady at 90@90¼ ꝑ cent. Illinois C. Bonds are better on the English quotations, and some improvement is shown on the Bonds of the Erie Company, while the stock is declining. La Crosse Land Grants were fairly supported until Friday and Saturday, when sellers appeared at 32½c.@32c.@31½c. ꝑ cent.

We here repeat the official terms offered by the Secretary of the Treasury, to bidders for the remaining $4,000,000 Treasury bills, to be awarded next Monday:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 15, 1858.

Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals will be received at this Department until the 14th day of June, proximo, for the issue of any portion, or the whole, of four millions of dollars in Treasury Notes in exchange for gold coin of the United States, deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, the Treasurer of the Mint at Philadelphia, the Treasurer of the Branch Mint at New-Orleans, or the Assistant Treasurers at Boston, New-York, Charleston, or St. Louis, within 10 days from the acceptance of such proposals, under the authority of the act of Congress entitled "An act to authorize the issue of Treasury Notes," approved 23d December, 1857.

The Treasury Notes will be issued upon the receipt here of certificates of deposit with those officers to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States. They will be made payable to the order of such bidder or bidders as shall agree to make such exchange at the lowest rate of interest, not exceeding 6 ꝑ cent. per annum, and will carry such rate from the date of the certificate of such deposit.

The proposals must state the rate of interest without condition and without reference to other bids, and contain no other fractional rates than one fourth, one-half, or three-fourths of one per centum. One per centum of the amount proposed to be exchanged must be deposited with one of the treasury officers above enumerated, whose certificate of such deposit must accompany each proposal, as security for its fulfillment. If the proposal is not accepted, immediate directions will be given to return such deposit. Should the proposals be variant from the provisions of the act of Congress, or of this notice, they will not be considered.

All proposals under this notice must be sealed, and inscribed on the outside, "Proposals for Treasury Notes." They will be opened at this Department at 12 o'clock, M., on said 14th day of June.

HOWELL COBB, Secretary of the Treasury.

The New-Orleans Picayune of Saturday week reports the following:

"There was no change of importance in the market to-day. A good business is doing for this season of the year, and there will be but little interruption to the ordinary course of trade this Summer. Money is growing easier. The Banks are buying Fall paper at 8 ꝑ cent., and the supply is not equal to the demand. Other grades go from 9@10.

The Bank Statement for the week will be found subjoined. It shows a considerable reduction in Discounts and Exchange, but a good deal of this has gone into long-dated paper.

The Exchange market shows no improvement. Very good Sterling was sold at 107¾, and 107⅞@108 appear to be outside figures. Sales of clear bills were made down to 107½. Drafts with bill of lading, 106¾@107. Some Francs were sold, to-day, within the range of our figures, say 5f. 25@5f. 17½. Sixty-days on New-York, 1½@2¼ ꝑ cent. discount. Sight was sold at 13-16, ¾, 15-16 and 1 ꝑ cent. discount."

The Pottsville Miners' Journal, of Saturday, June 5, reports as follows of the Anthracite Coal Trade of the week:

"The quantity sent by railroad is 23,343.08—by canal, 25,726.03—for the week, 49,069.11 tons, against 40,371 tons by railroad, and 36,053 tons by canal, for the corresponding week last year—showing a loss of 27,354 tons. The regions sending to the shipping ports near New-York gain 17,908 tons over the corresponding week last year.

The break which occurred in the Canal last week was repaired, so as to permit boats to pass, on Wednesday evening last.

The Coal trade this week sums up as follows:

	1857.	1858.
Schuylkill Railroad	40,371	23,343
Shuylkill Canal	36,052	25,726
Lehigh Railroad	11,823	12,125
Lehigh Canal	34,973	31,744
Delaware and Hudson Co	12,438	14,154
Pennsylvania Coal Co	17,265	25,244
Scranton, South	7,675	15,888
Total tonnage	160,597	148,254

The following shows the loss and gain from the different regions in the aggregate, compared with last year:

	1857.	1858.
Schulkill Railroad	779,645	607,166
Schuylkill Canal	260,315	221,101
Lehigh Valley Railroad	161,199	199,319
Lehigh Valley Canal	130,538	135,208
Delaware and Hudson Co	29,470	36,919
Pennsylvania Coal Co	35,499	63,702
Scranton, South	117,949	169,549
Total tonnage	1,534,415	1,432,964

Schuylkill County loses 231,693, and the other regions gain 130,242 tons."

Mr. A. RODEWALD, broker in foreign bills, who recently opened an office No. 46 Exchange-place, has associated with Mr. A. WINTERHOFF, under the style of RODEWALD & WINTERHOFF, in the same office.

The telegraph this morning makes the gratifying announcement from Harrisburg that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has granted a mandamus to the creditors of Alleghany County, to compel the County Commissioners to levy and collect a sufficient tax to pay all interest in default, and to become due upon the Bonds of the County. The suit against the City of Pittsburg situate in this county, is pending in the United States Court for Western Pennsylvania. There is scarcely a doubt the City authorities will also be compelled to provide for that portion of their debt which they have been attempting to repudiate. The subject begins at length to attract the notice of the Press in Pennsylvania, and a writer in one of the Philadelphia papers, after dwelling on the fact that Pittsburg has been built up by the Railway system, in the completion of which her faith and property were pledged in bonds now attempted to be made invalid, (because some of the Railways are unable to pay the interest,) adds the following reference to an indorsement by the State Legislature:

"But there is another view of the subject of this repudiation which shows it in more deformity than anything else. By act of April 8, 1851, the Legislature of Pennsylvania enacted that, 'Bonds or certificates of debt created by the county of Alleghany, the city of Alleghany, and the city of Pittsburgh, be and are hereby declared legal investments of money by executors, guardians or trustees.' It is known to the writer of this that, in several cases, the Orphans Court of this county have authorized trustees to invest the moneys of their cest-que trust in these very railroad issues of Pittsburgh and Alleghany county, under the sanction of this act of Assembly. And that Court and others in the Commonwealth have doubtless made the same order in many instances not known to the writer.

Thus have the means of subsistence of widows and orphans, by virtue of law, been placed out at interest in firm reliance on the 'faith, credit and property' of the city of Pittsburgh and county of Alleghany. All of which they have renounced by this terrible repudiation. And now they ask us to trust them again."
